

Truman Will Be "Happy" To Have Barkley On '48 Ticket

Philadelphia, July 13 (AP) — Democratic Chairman Howard J. McGrath said today President Truman "will be most happy" to have Sen. Alben Barkley of Kentucky as his running mate.

McGrath told a news conference that if the convention sees fit to pick Barkley for second place, the President "will be most happy to welcome him."

The President's statement seemed to make it certain that the 70-year-old Kentucky senator will round out the ticket.

This ticket would be opposed in November by Gov. Dewey of New York, the GOP presidential nominee, and Gov. Earl Warren of California, his running mate.

Asked whether President Truman had talked with Senator Barkley since last night, McGrath said:

"I'm pretty sure that he has."

McGrath said no final decision has been made on whether the convention can adjourn tomorrow night but that possibility is being considered.

Philadelphia, July 13 (AP)—A 1948 Truman-Barkley ticket seemed to be in the making today as the Democratic convention swung into its second day's session.

There were some apparent drawbacks, however, to this solution of a mixed up, north-south, left-right, pro- and anti-Truman fight that has left bewildered delegates hanging on the ropes wondering what might happen next.

Ovations for Barkley

President Truman is as sure of top place as any mortal man can be. Big state leaders—including Frank Hague of New Jersey, and Paul E. Fitzpatrick of New York—were dying hard in their opposition to the Kentucky veteran.

After Barkley had provided the convention's first breath of excitement—a 28-minute stampede for his Vice Presidential candidacy last night—these leaders huddled with Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing in the Convention Hall office of Democratic Chairman J. Howard McGrath.

Ewing came out like a man who had swallowed the canary of a Barkley Vice Presidential boom and looked for his own to mushroom. The others wouldn't talk, either. But there seemed little doubt that if they take Barkley, it will be with the greatest of reluctance.

Battle for Barkley

Against this, Leslie L. Biffle, sergeant-at-arms of the convention and one of Mr. Truman's close advisors, told reporters after a stag party for Barkley that the Kentuckian is in. "I think it is a cinch. I think there is no question about it," he said.

Barkley, who has maintained complete silence in the last two days about his evident availability, stood within earshot as Biffle made his comment.

The Kentuckian, as minority leader of the Senate, has gone down the line for President Truman's legislative program.

Often a Democratic keynoter, he never has been a vice presidential bridesmaid, although he was among the contenders in 1940 and again in 1944. That was the year Mr. Truman was chosen for second place on the Franklin D. Roosevelt ticket.

The slow-starting demonstration for Barkley, paced at the beginning by the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home," developed into the convention's first real lift last night.

In the nearly half hour it lasted it showed that the old warhorse has made a lot of friends in the Democratic party since the late President Roosevelt penned his famous "Dear Alben" letter in 1937 and thereby made him the party's Senate leader.

Ovation Makes Converts

The Roosevelt-Barkley friendship came to an abrupt end seven years later when Roosevelt slapped a veto on an income tax bill over Barkley's advice. The Kentuckian immediately resigned his leadership post but was re-elected by his fellow senators within a matter of hours.

Last night's demonstration—which some Dixie delegates were betting was longer than the one Mr. Truman will receive when he wins the party's presidential nomination Wednesday—made some quick converts.

Robert E. Hannegan, former Democratic national chairman who helped put Mr. Truman on the ticket in 1944, said it looked to him as though the demonstration "has decided the issue" for Barkley.

Clinton P. Anderson, former secretary of agriculture, told a reporter he doesn't think the Barkley show would have been allowed to go on so long if the president had been set against having the Kentuckian for his running mate.

35 TEACHERS SELECTED BY SCHOOL BOARD

The Gettysburg Joint School System Monday night elected 35 elementary school teachers and a school nurse.

Meeting at the Gettysburg high school, the joint boards named the teachers without making any assignment of schools, placing that duty in the hands of the teacher committee. In addition it authorized the committee and Superintendent Lloyd C. Keefe to name a librarian for the high school and to select, if needed, another teacher for the high school. It also left vacant at least one more elementary school teacher position, being unable to decide immediately just how many more teachers will be needed in elementary schools.

LT. COL. WEAVER SAYS HISTORY OF WAR IS FACTUAL

The U. S. Army is calling a "spade a spade" in the planned 99-volume history of World War II. Lt. Col. William G. Weaver, Baltimore street, told the local Rotary club Monday night.

Speaking at a dinner meeting in the YWCA, Colonel Weaver, who has just completed a six-month tour of active duty with the historical section, headquarters, U. S. Army field forces, at Fort Monroe, Va., said that: "The History of World War II is just about completed. We had started on World War I while the writing of World War II's history was still going on, but a better set-up for historical writing was established for this war. Historical officers in various units made up histories for their units shortly after the war ended. Now the work of writing the overall history is well underway."

"And the history is being written accurately. If errors occurred, they are being put down in black and white and with whatever importance they deserve. No man is being spared, no matter how many stars he may have on his shoulder. And there is a good reason for this. If the history of the present war is to help the future to avoid similar mistakes then it must be factual and honest."

Noon Meeting Next Week

Gettysburg Country Club, With Picturesque 9-Hole Course, Regulation Pool, Pro Shop, Locker Room And Club House, Is Completed

Formal opening of the new Gettysburg Country club on Lincolnway west, seven-tenths of a mile from town, is planned in the near future, at which time the public will be invited to visit the club. However, most of its facilities, including the new nine-hole golf course, one of the finest in the state, and the swimming pool, are now being used.

To a golfer, whether he shoots in the low 70's or is just plain "dub," the Gettysburg course is a "dream" layout. To anyone, considered from almost any angle, the course and the club and its other appurtenances represent scenic, athletic and social values better than most and comparable with the best.

Fine Golf Course

The club is not quite one year old, but the turf on the fairways, the carpet of the greens and the sod on the tees show a development seldom accomplished in such a short space of time. Officials of the club credit this not only to natural fertility of the soil and the work of the golf course committee who laid out the course, but principally to the efforts of Sam Mellon, the golf pro, whose previous experience as an expert greenskeeper is reflected in the approaching perfection of the new course.

The club was given the assistance of State College experts and M. T. Hartman, county agricultural agent. (Please turn to Page 6)

John S. Rice Is Mentioned As Congressional Candidate

John S. Rice, West Broadway, chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation at the Democratic national convention now in session in Philadelphia, and former two-term member of the state Senate from the Adams-Franklin district, today is being prominently mentioned to be the Democratic standard-bearer for Congress in the November election.

He would, if selected and he accepts, take the place of State Senator Guy A. Leader, of York, who won the nomination at the primaries in April and who withdrew from the race, Monday, because of ill-health.

"I have no comment" was the response Rice gave to a reporter's inquiry this morning when he was reached at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, Philadelphia, and asked whether he would make the campaign.

Praises Leader

"Senator Leader is a very capable man. His vast legislative experience and natural capabilities would make him an able representative in Congress," Rice said. "I have not heard that he has officially withdrawn. If he has, I am sorry that he was forced to make that decision."

Rice was then asked: "Will you run for Congress if you are selected to take Senator Leader's place?"

"I am not a candidate," was his reply.

BOARD NOT TO ACCEPT PART OF MT. JOY PUPILS

Gettysburg's school system Monday night gave an "all or none" answer to a request from the Littlestown joint system that Mt. Joy township high school students who had previously entered Gettysburg high school be permitted to continue their studies there.

In a resolution passed by the joint board it was pointed out that traditionally most of the Mt. Joy township high school students have attended Gettysburg high school; that if youngsters who in the future may want to attend Gettysburg from Mt. Joy are prohibited from doing so, then "we will be obligated to deny admission to any pupils from Mount Joy township."

The resolution follows: "Whereas the Littlestown Joint school system through its president, H. Allen Walker and its supervising principal, Paul E. King, has requested the Gettysburg Joint School System to admit to Gettysburg high school only those pupils from the Mt. Joy district who were enrolled during the school year 1947-48, and whereas for a number of years the Gettysburg high school has served the greater number of all secondary pupils from the Mt. Littlestown CHRIST CHURCH PICNIC SET FOR SATURDAY AUG. 7

Plans are in progress for the annual picnic of Christ Reformed Sunday school, near town, which will be held in the church grove about a third of a mile beyond the church on Saturday, August 7. This picnic has been an annual event in this church grove since 1890 excepting one year during World War II, when it was called off on account of travel restrictions. This picnic dates even farther back than 1890 when for many years it was held at Silver Oak, near Sells Station, and in the Le-Pevre woods, east of the church. Many former members of the church and former residents of the community come back to Christ church woods and not only partake of the chicken dinner, but also meet their

The Greyhound bus terminal, North Washington street, and the Greyhound post house adjoining, stood charged Monday night by residents of this vicinity with a series of offenses against the peace and quiet of the neighborhood ranging from the throwing of dirty water in Race Horse alley and blocking the alley by buses to motorcycle rodeos and other "shows" late at night and odors from the exhausts from buses whose motors were "raced" unnecessarily.

Thirteen residents attended a meeting in the engine house called by Councilman Wilbur J. Stallsmith, chairman of the safety committee, and aired their numerous complaints. "All I know about this is what I have read in The Gettysburg Times," Mr. Stallsmith said. "I would like to know what is going on, so I can bring the matter before the borough council and do something about it," he added.

File Many Complaints

A "bill of particulars" drawn from complaints listed at the meeting would contain the following allegations:

Too much noise in Race Horse alley from the post house kitchen. This included placing garbage cans in the alley where they were struck by automobiles and upset, the garbage and papers being scattered, and the unnecessary "slamming" of screen doors.

The "gunning" of bus motors. One complainant said he timed one bus which he said had its motor "racing" for 22 minutes. Fumes from the motors enter apartment windows and combined with the noise make it almost impossible for residents to sleep, it was charged.

Fighting in the alley and on North Washington street. Complainants said they had called borough police, and that on one occasion no police officer appeared for an hour and a quarter and on another occasion not until the trouble was "all over."

PAIR IS CHARGED WITH VIOLATING LAW AT AUCTION

Borough police this morning arrested Ben E. Jacobs, 510 West Madison avenue, New York city, and Walter Baker, 18 Province street, Boston, Mass., on charges that in conducting an auction sale at the jewelry store of Penrose Myers, Baltimore street, they sold merchandise not a part of the regular stock of the store.

Jacobs and Baker were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Robert P. Snyder, waived hearings, and were held for court August 23. They were released in $1,000 bail each, furnished by Mr. Myers.

The charge is a misdemeanor, under a section of the law which prohibits the sale of merchandise other than as advertised at such a sale. The auction sale, which opened at the Myers store, June 25, was advertised as a going out of business sale of the Myers stock.

Chief of Police Robert C. Harpster said that the sale had been under investigation for a week. He said that Jacobs and Baker had merchandise shipped to them at the Hotel Gettysburg, where they were staying, and sold it at the auction sale as part of the stock of the Myers store.

Harpster signed one of the warrants on which the two men were arrested, and Patrolman Ralph Pissel signed the other. Jacobs and Baker were represented by the law firm of Swope, Brown and Swope.

PLAN AUSTRALIA SCHOONER TRIP

Wilmington, Calif., May 13 (AP)—If there's a young couple looking for an adventurous way of getting to Australia, Dwight Atwater is your man.

With his wife, Carol, and three children, he's readying a 50-foot auxiliary staysail schooner for a voyage he expects will require four months. There's room for another couple to share the expenses (and work).

"I think Australia is a land of opportunity and I want to make my home there," Atwater said. "We can't book steamer passage until 1949 so we bought this boat to make the trip."

The starting date is set tentatively for May 20. The schooner, purchased with money realized from sale of the family home, is being provisioned at the Fellows and Stewart shipyards here. It is equipped with a 110-horsepower auxiliary engine.

Atwater hopes to settle in or near Brisbane and become a commercial fisherman. His children are Carol Belle, 16; Marilyn, 14; and Stephanie, 15 months.

Fayetteville House Moved To Kingsdale

The perambulating home of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Crouse, Littlestown R. 1, arrived in Kingsdale Monday afternoon after traveling from Fayetteville where it originally was a service station.

Crouse purchased the dwelling from a family which had converted the former filling station into a home. When the state highway secured a right of way for the new Lincoln highway the house was on the right of way. Crouse did some rapid figuring and estimated it would be cheaper, quicker and easier to buy the already built dwelling and move it to Kingsdale than to hire carpenters—most of whom are signed up for months ahead anyway—and build a new house.

He conferred with his father, Walter F. Crouse, Littlestown R. D., who had the equipment, and so the house was moved—traveling the 30 miles from start to finish including through Gettysburg, in five hours of traveling. The trip took longer than that however, with the house being pulled off to the side at Caststown over the week-end and pulling off the road occasionally to permit traffic to pass. The house covered the entire width of the highway.

13 RESIDENTS

"Buses park any way at all," was one of the charges. Double parking was alleged. "They park so that you can't see when you drive out of the alley, and if you toot your horn they get mad at you," another complainant said.

The bus company was also charged with servicing its buses in the street. Drivers and others engaged in loud talk late at night or during early morning hours, it was alleged. On one occasion several persons staged a "rodeo" early in the morning by riding a motorcycle around the block several times. Wash water from the post house is thrown in the alley, and gives off an offensive odor in the hot sun, it was claimed.

Not only do the buses block the alley according to another complainant, but the borough police car blocks it while the police get their coffee.

Residents in the vicinity are kept awake at night by the loud noise from a juke box at the terminal and by a loud speaker used to announce departure of buses, it was said.

Several times complaints were made to the manager of the post house or to the dispatcher, it was alleged, and the manager "got huffy," and a complainant said bus drivers even told North Washington street residents they could not park between the terminal and Chambersburg street. Allegedly without borough authority, a workman began the erection of "no parking" signs on the east side of the street, the complainant said.

When complaints were made, screen doors were slammed and garbage can lids rattled harder, and "then they would look toward the apartments." These offenses were "deliberate," it was charged.

Another resident said that "bus drivers and others laugh and carry on after midnight like a show," and still others charged that whiskey bottles were broken in the street, "drunks" disturbed their sleep and there were frequent fights.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
New York, July 13 (AP)—From Texas, where men have the habit of saying what they think, comes the roundabout report of a small rube involving the Austin Pioneers of the class "B" Big State league and an umpire who shall remain nameless.

It was a game in which two Austin players were bounced, three fist fights broke out in the stands, a rabbit interrupted the game by running across the field and two balls were in play at one time.

The climax of the caustic criticism came when the ump stalked majestically across to the Austin bench and proclaimed: "The next guy who says I stink will be thrown out of the game." And finally, when the tossing and other incidents were completed, Austin Manager Hank Oana asked: "Why don't you go back to that class 'D' league where you came from?"

The ump didn't hesitate before replying: "By golly, I wish I was back there. I was making more money there than I am here." It was in another, distant league, the Pony, that Umpire Al Chay had to abandon his duties during a game because of high blood pressure. But it was bound to happen somewhere.

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE
Did you know the football season begins tomorrow? Yeah, the Los Angeles Dons report for training at Ventura, Calif., and Admiral Jonas Ingram, All-America conference head, marks the occasion by stating: "The conference will enjoy its best year. x x x Each of the eight clubs is a possible contender."

The Zollner Pistons of Fort Wayne, Ind., who claim the world's softball championship, haven't lost more than two games in succession for the past eight years. Villanova college already is beating the drums for its football tussle with Texas A&M at Shibe Park Sept. 18. Just late enough to get the World Series out of the way.

Two Harness Drivers Are Fined, Suspended
Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 13 (AP)—Saratoga raceway judges have ruled that two harness race drivers did not try their best to win.

The judges yesterday suspended Aubrey Rodney and Pete Losee for 10 days and fined each $100.

Rodney handled Major Abbee, owned by the Lucknow stables, Plymouth, N. H. Losee drove Martin Song, owned by the Markay stable Cohoes, N. Y. The Markay stable received a 30-day suspension.

Major Abbee finished second. Martin Song ran out of the money in the race won by Tryanne, owned by Harold O'Connor and Fred Taylor of Glenn Falls and driven by Vernon Devlin of Lake Placid. The Mutual payoff was $58.20 on a $2 win ticket.

Would Add Seven Women To Team
Providence, R. I., July 13 (AP)—After reporting the results of the U. S. Olympic women's final track and field tryouts, Mrs. Catherine D. Meyer of Maplewood, N. J., chairwoman of that group's committee, today found herself limited to an 11-girl team for the nine feminine events on the international game's program.

But she had hopes that an appeal to higher authorities on her arrival in New York later today will result in providing funds for the addition of seven others she rates as worthy of carrying the U. S. shield in the London competition.

7 MAJOR TEAMS IN EXHIBITIONS; DODGERS BOOED

New York, July 13 (AP)—The annual all-star game usually means three days off for players not selected for either the National or American League squads but that isn't the case this year.

Yesterday, the first of the three idle days for big league clubs, saw seven major league teams engage in exhibition games.

With the exception of a game between the St. Louis Browns and the Philadelphia Phillies at Cooperstown, N. Y., all of the contests took place at night.

At Cooperstown, the Browns won a battle of homers from the Phils, 7-5. The Browns socked five round-trippers, the Phils two. Andy Anderson hit two, and Ed Pellagrini, Don Lund and pitcher Bryan Stephens one apiece for the Browns while Del Ennis and Gran Hamner hit one each for the Phils.

The Brooklyn Dodgers were trounced, 15-8, by their Montreal International League farm hands before 17,899 booing fans at Montreal.

Pirates Beaten
Pittsburgh's Pirates also were defeated, 5-1, by their Indianapolis farm club of the American Association at Indianapolis. Former major leaguers Jim Walsh and Jack Hallett limited the Pirates to seven hits.

At Buffalo, N. Y., the New York Giants, led by Clint Hartung and Les Layton who hit homers, downed the Buffalo Bisons of the International league, 8-3.

The Philadelphia Athletics, behind the four-hit pitching of Bob Savage, Charley Harris and Les McCrabb, blanked the Wilmington Inter-State league Blue Rocks, 3-0 at Wilmington, Del.

Cleveland's American league leading Indians trounced their Dayton Class A Central league farm team, 16-4 at Dayton, Ohio.

OLYMPIC TEAMS SAIL TOMORROW

New York, July 13 (AP)—Talk of a big army sergeant with a seemingly endless store of endurance—Ohio State's Mal Whitfield—rose above all the confusion today as more than 300 of the United States' Olympic athletes went through final processing for the trip to London.

The major portion of the American delegation—to consist of 346 competitors and 63 officials—will sail for England tomorrow aboard the liner America.

As they hurried through the routine of passports, medical examinations and amateur oaths, discussion in official quarters centered on the surprising Ohio State sophomore who scored a double in the Olympic track tryouts last week-end—in the 800- and 400-meter runs.

"He well could be the surprise of the Olympic games," predicted Veteran Track Coach Dean Cromwell. Whitfield probably will concentrate on the 800 in which he ran a 1:56.6 in the Olympic tryouts at Evanston, Ill.

Spirits were high as representatives of 17 varied sports teams prepared to take off for the first post-war Olympiad, to be staged July 29 through August 14. A total of 272 athletes and a quota of officials and chaperons will leave on the America, arriving at Southampton, England, July 21.

Interstate League

(By The Associated Press)
The pace setting Wilmington Blue Rocks were idle in Interstate league competition last night and the second place Allentown Cardinals took advantage of that fact by turning back York twice, 8-3 and 10-2. The double victory pulled Allentown to within a game and a half of first place in the league standings.

The third place Trenton Giants could take no advantage of Wilmington's idleness, however, as the Giants lost a single decision to the Harrisburg Senators 8-7.

Hagerstown's Owls defeated the Lancaster Red Roses 6-3 in the remaining game played last night. Wilmington was turned back by the Philadelphia Athletics 3-0 in an exhibition game. Sunbury was not scheduled.

Today's schedule: Lancaster at York, Trenton at Sunbury and Allentown at Hagerstown. (Harrisburg plays Philadelphia Athletics in an exhibition).

Eastern League

(By The Associated Press)
Southpaw Jim Davis helped the Scranton Miners retain their two-game margin in the Eastern league race by stopping the Elmira Pioneers, 15-4, last night for his 13th straight victory.

The second-place Utica Blue Sox kept pace with the league leaders by scoring seven runs in the eighth to beat the Hartford Chiefs, 11-7. The Albany Senators made it two-out-of-three in their current series at Binghamton by defeating the triplets, 6-3. At Williamsport, Lou Kretlow returned to his winning ways and scored a 4-3 triumph for the Tigers over the Wilkes-Barre Barons.

WILLIAMS WINS BATTLE BY TKO

(By The Associated Press)
Philadelphia, July 13 (AP)—Ike Williams finally found an opponent who didn't know what it meant to back-track and the String Bean Kid from Trenton, N. J., used him as a medium to prove he's a great lightweight champion.

Williams scored a six-round technical knockout last night over Beau Jack, windmill-swinging former shoeshine boy who sought to make boxing history by becoming the first fighter ever to win the same title three times. Each fighter entered the ring at 134 pounds.

A disappointing crowd of 12,952 paid $83,787 at Shibe Park and saw the ever-advancing Jack swarm all over the champion in the early rounds, Williams, jabbing and counter-punching, simply waited patiently for an opening.

In the sixth, the champion caught Jack with a left hook and, battering him with countless rights and lefts, pinned him against the ropes. Ike looked to Referee Charley Dagher to stop it but he said no.

"Keep fighting, Ike," shouted Dagher above the tumult of the crowd. Jack wanted to fall but he couldn't and finally Dagher stepped in and called a halt after 33 seconds of the round.

ALL STAR TILT FINDS JUNIOR TEAM BATTERED

By JOE REICHLER
St. Louis, July 13 (AP)—The National league had everything to lose and little to gain today as it squared off against its American league rival in the 15th annual all-star baseball game.

A victory over the battered and undermanned American league outfit is imperative of the Nationals will lose a load of prestige. This is the one the senior circuitmen, who have suffered 10 pastings in 14 outings, must win.

The American leaguers, seeking their third straight, were minus their "big four" consisting of sluggers Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio and ace pitchers Hal Newhouse and Bob Feller. In addition, George Kell, selected as the league's No. 1 third baseman, was stricken as a starter.

Today's Talk

A WORKABLE PHILOSOPHY

I believe that every human being should early formulate a philosophy of life. I know that I did—to a large degree—before I was out of my teens. And by this philosophy I mean certain principles agreed upon as guides of thought and conduct.

But this philosophy must be a workable one—one that also can be enlarged and amended. Every day of one's life this philosophy should be made more and more workable so as to guide one happily and efficiently to the very end.

You have met those who took catastrophe, sorrow, and dire disappointment, without a whimper or complaint. This philosophy kept them on an even keel. We have no more control over what may happen to us on the morrow than we have over the weather. It is highly important that we decide to face events calmly, without excitement, and like a stoic.

Our teen-agers of today deserve more credit than they get. I feel with them as I did when I was one of them. Unconsciously to themselves, and to those about them, they are actually formulating a philosophy of life, fitted to the times, that will place them among the useful and great of tomorrow. The last war brought out this fact—and how heroic were those boys and young women under the severest test of character!

The late Dr. Osler had a term for this workable philosophy which he called "A Way of Life." That is really what it is, but a way that every individual has to map out for himself. Self-control, self-reliance, and no borrowed crutches. Everyone his own supreme guide and counselor. You have noted how some people grow immediately panicky under a sudden emergency, while others are calm and controlled. These latter are the ones who have established a workable philosophy that does not desert them when trouble or disaster arrives. Nor is it so-called fatalism. I prefer to mark it down as individual spiritual poetry.

The earlier this workable philosophy is initiated, the better, for it can be strengthened, enriched, and made more habitual year by year, an enemy to all fear as well.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Favorite Flowers."

WALKING CAST

A pretty nurse, with cold concern,
Held high the leg, lest it should turn.
A skillful doctor then applied
A stocking, inches much too wide,
And snipped away as much of hose
As would display my ugly toes.
And then, about my ankle passed
The stuff that makes a walking cast.

"A walking cast," said he, "I'll be
That leaves you free of thigh and knee.
Although 'twill weigh almost a pound,
With ease you'll carry it around.
When once this job is neatly done,
If you should want to, you can run."
With that, above my form he bent
And whistled as to work he went.

I watched him as with fingers deft
He splashed the plaster right and left,
And round my ankle toiled to make
A thing a hammer couldn't break.
I said, "Before this cast I use,
Tell me if you've paid up your dues?
Have you a union card to show
From AFL or CIO?"

SEES "ENOUGH" OIL THIS YEAR

Philadelphia, May 13 (AP)—Dr. Robert E. Wilson, chairman of the board of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, said last night the nation's domestic fuel oil supply should be sufficient this year, barring "serious strikes or catastrophes."

Addressing the refining division of the American Petroleum Institute, Dr. Wilson warned, however, that production would not furnish enough for all consumers if oil burner installations even approach those of last year.

He said the expected seven to eight per cent increase in 1948 production would represent a 17 per cent increase above the wartime domestic fuel oil production peak—and 44 per cent above the pre-war high in 1941.

The oil executive added that a long war involving the United States would make it necessary for the government to take every drop of household fuel to supply fleets of jet-propelled planes. He added:

"If I should prophesy that we will get by and the public, relying on such predictions, should reduce efforts to conserve oil and gasoline and step up its oil burner installations to even approach those of last year, we would undoubtedly have a shortage much worse than that of last year."

WARM WEATHER AIDS FARMERS

Harrisburg, May 13 (AP)—The current warm weather spell is a boon to Pennsylvania's farmers, State Agriculture Secretary Miles Horst said today.

If it continues a week or so, he said, winter grains will improve and growers will have opportunity to plant corn on time.

Horst said a statewide survey showed 67 per cent of the spring plowing completed despite wet weather in recent weeks. This figure compares with 61 per cent at the same time last year.

Spring sowing and planting is 46 per cent finished, compared to 38 per cent a year earlier, he added.

The state wheat crop for this year is now forecast at 21,208,000 bushels on the basis of conditions on May 1, the secretary said. This is about one-third of a million bushels more than the April 1 estimate.

The wheat acreage has been estimated at 964,000 acres compared with 929,000 last year and the 10-year (1937-46) average of 898,000 acres. Last year's wheat crop was 22,296,000 bushels. The average is 18,458,000 bushels. The 1948 U. S. winter wheat crop is estimated at 845,484,000 bushels, about 223,000,000 less than last year.

ers" was given by Mrs. Kenneth D. James. The group then joined in singing, "Pack up your Troubles" and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

A reading was given by Mrs. Wilson Greene and remarks were made by the class teacher and president. The program closed with singing of "Perfect Day." Gifts were awarded to Mrs. Charles Lemmon, the oldest mother present and to Mrs. Wilcox Greene, the youngest mother present.

Duff Approves New Head For College

Harrisburg, May 13 (AP)—Gov. James H. Duff gave official approval to the appointment of Dr. Willis E. Pratt as president of the Indiana State Teachers' college.

The governor's approval of Dr. Pratt was announced yesterday by Dr. Francis B. Haas, state superintendent of public instruction.

Dr. Pratt, now head of the department of education at the Pennsylvania State college, will receive $7,500 a year in his new post. He fills a vacancy created last year by the death of Dr. Joseph M. Uhler.

Dr. Pratt served eight years as assistant superintendent of the Erie county schools and three years, 1938-41, as superintendent.

Becoming president of the Mansfield State Teachers' college in September of 1941, he entered the army on July 1, 1943, and served in Italy. Dr. Pratt is a graduate of Allegheny college and holds master's and doctor's degrees from the University of Pittsburgh.

Today's Talk

ON BROODING

Oh, how every element of the body, and every faculty of the mind, shrinks, slows up, and is thrown into confusion when mental brooding is on! It is as though a ship at sea should lose its rudder and its Captain should leap into the briny deep.

The brooding person is useless to himself and bad news for anyone with whom he seeks contact. Why, then, should any of us ever brood? Brooders are always trying to find someone who will sympathize with them, thinking that this will justify their brooding. But nothing justifies it!

To brood over sorrow, disappointment or perhaps financial loss is only to add to them. No one is alone in his troubles or anxieties. We all have them. To master them, to rise above them is the problem, and millions of people have done so, else we wouldn't have so many happy and successful people in the world. One's usefulness strikes a snag, and day turns to night with no lights on, when brooding takes the helm. It's the intrepid Captain, with stardust in his soul, who weathers the violent storm.

The first step to take when brooding creeps upon anyone is to search for an interest. It's like flirting with the sun, behind a cloud—that soon breaks through—and, lo and behold, all is changed! It's that easy. I am of the opinion that perhaps Emerson had the brooder in mind when he gave the exhortation: "Hitch your wagon to a star!" It would seem that we would go far with a star ahead of us on our journey through a day, a month, a year—or through life!

No situation is ever so bad as the brooder thinks. Self-pity and the devil are relatives. And they both harbor about the one who broods. So, to the brooder I would earnestly suggest that he select a few cheerful companions and get as far away from himself as possible. That is the trouble with the brooder. He is all wrapped up in himself. Freedom is his salvation.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Popularity."

The Poet of the People

LETTER NO. XX
Beloved, when we started for the cottage by the lake,

I could swear I heard you saying:
"All of this you have to take!
There's the play pen for the baby and that sack of children's shoes,

And there's nothing to be taken but the things I want to use."

Oh, I'm sure I heard you chuckle
as I headed for the shack
With a floor lamp that was riding on the middle of my back.

Beloved, you remember how it was when you were here,
And those "useful at the cottage things" you'd gathered through the year.

You recall the way I grumbled as I saw the fearful pile.

"You can manage it," you told me,
and you said it with a smile.
You had everything from teaspoons to a dress form made of wire.

Which did not improve my temper
when I had to change a tire.

Beloved, I am certain, when at last
I got away,

The car had the appearance of a second-hand man's dray.

They had emptied out the attic of its treasures large and small—
Things that Betty thinks are wanted, but will never use at all.

"They'll be perfect at the cottage.
They're too good to throw away."

And I'd swear that you were talking, for that's what you used to say.

MEAT PRICES AT NEW HIGHS; KEEP LIVING COSTS UP

By WILLIAM FERRIS

Chicago, July 13 (P)—With live-stock pounding out new price records every few days, no immediate drop in the high cost of living on meat was seen today.

Both private trade experts and the Agriculture Department agreed the near future outlook offered slight hope for the consumer. If anything, prices probably will go higher later this summer, they said.

The prospect for lower prices next year was called encouraging, although largely hinged on the hope of a bumper corn crop this autumn.

Hog prices at Chicago yesterday equaled their all-time record of $30.50 a hundred pounds. A new record of $30.25 was made at East St. Louis, Ill. Other midwestern markets rang up prices at about all-time peaks.

World Record Sale

Pretty much the same story was told in cattle and sheep. East St. Louis had an all-time record for choice steers at $38.75. Steers at Chicago touched $40.00, equaling the July record set last week. Lambs also were bringing the highest price for any July in history at $32.00.

In Sioux City, Ia., a load of 64 steers averaging 1,011 pounds sold for $33 per hundredweight to set a world record for a single sale of feeder cattle. The gross price paid for the 64 animals was $25,324.10.

George Dressler, secretary of the National Retail Meat Dealers Association, said the normal summer falling-off in demand for meat had appeared this year but wasn't big enough to make up for the shortage in meat production.

No Immediate Relief

"Prices probably are the highest on record at retail shops," Dressler admitted.

As far as consumer resistance was concerned, Dressler said some housewives backed away from high prices but others went right on buying regardless of what the price was.

H. M. Conway of the National Livestock Producers Association, one of the private trade experts who warned of the current meat animal shortage last April 30, saw little improvement in the present situation until September.

"Production of grain finished beef, which ordinarily comes to market now, was cut down sharply this year," Conway said. "There won't be any change in the current shortage until the grass fed cattle start arriving in numbers, probably around September 1 or 15."

PUC AUTHORIZES RAIL FARE BOOST

Harrisburg, July 13 (P)—The Public Utility Commission has authorized railroads operating within Pennsylvania to boost their passenger fares, effective Monday, July 19.

The effective date for the rate increase will coincide with increases in interstate passenger fares approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission last week.

The rate boost will jump one-way coach fares 20 per cent or approximately three cents a mile, while one-way Pullman fares go up 14.3 per cent or about four cents a mile.

In addition, the new rates include a minimum children's fare of 10 cents between points in Pennsylvania. A previous commission order established the minimum for adults at 15 cents.

The commission said excess baggage charges are to be increased in proportion to the increases in fares for Pullman travel.

Round trip fares will be increased proportionately under the new rates for distances up to 225 miles. For distances over this limit, the new three-month, round-trip fares in Pullmans will decline from four cents a mile at 225 miles to approximately 3.6 cents per mile at 700 miles.

Find My Killer

Chapter 27

I hung up, very slowly, because I didn't want her to see how my hand was shaking. "Diane, tell me all about your husband's Uncle Gwynne."

"But I hardly knew Gwynne Ealing," she said. "He died before I married Dick."

"Was there anything strange about Gwynne Ealing's death?"

"Not that I can tell you," she said in her usual cagey way. "He was an elderly man, with a bad heart. I doubt if anybody felt very badly when he went, including Dick."

"Now about Mrs. Pettigrew," I said. "After I go, maybe she'll show up."

"And what must I do?"

"Convince her that if she's not guilty of murder, she's hurting herself by hiding or trying to run away. Get her to come downtown to my office and talk to me about it."

Downtown, I hunted up Dr. Stokes's office. I walked into an office with a walnut desk, comfortable chairs, and books right up to the ceiling. Dr. Stokes looked at me from behind the desk. "Well, Yates? I hope this is important."

"It's about Gwynne Ealing," I said.

He took off his spectacles, scowled at them, and put them back on. "Ever since you came to town, I've had to neglect my practice. Now I don't know how I'll catch up. What about Gwynne Ealing? He was my patient years ago."

"When he died," I added. "Tell me about it."

He turned to a filing cabinet and brought out a folder. He opened it and studied some papers. "Gwynne Ealing was an angina case. Angina pectoris is, of course, more the name for a symptom than for the condition itself. Laymen call it neuralgia of the heart. Ealing's trouble was arteriosclerotic. When you have that, you must ease off, rest, stop worrying and keep from losing your temper. You cut down on your smoking and drinking. You eat plain foods, and not too much of them. You're careful about traveling and you stop any rough games you may like to play."

"Where did Gwynne Ealing slip up?"

"I couldn't say exactly. It was four years ago. Let's see what I've got down here." He skimmed through one of the papers in the folder, then another. "I'd been to his house the night before, yes. He'd been feeling better, was up and around the house. I cautioned him, as I had done many times before, against overexerting himself. I gave him a checkup before I left, and the doctor paused to look at more notes. "His heart was shaky, but nothing out of the ordinary for him. The next morning they called me up to say that he'd died in his sleep."

"Who called you?" I asked. "His nephew? Richard Ealing?"

"Dick was a game warden then and he was up in the northern part of the state. It was Gwynne Ealing's housekeeper, Mrs. Pettigrew."

"Doctor," I said, "was Alchisez working for you then?"

"Why, yes. Where does he fit in?"

"That's what I'm earning your money to find out. I looked at my watch. "The afternoon's wearing along."

I went back to my own office. J. D. was there, and with her was the man who had been in Bensinger's club.

"He's over here to tell us what he knows," said J. D., "and I've been saying how much we appreciate it."

"I saw Bensinger for just a minute early this morning at seven-thirty—thirty-five, maybe. He said he could wait for his breakfast, because he was on the way to make some important dough."

"Did he say where? And what?"

"Only that it tied up with the Ealing bump-off. That he'd doped out half the story, and somebody else had told him the other half, and between them they'd make somebody pay plenty to keep them quiet."

He went out.

"That's important," I said to J. D.

"I think so, too. But why do you think so?"

"Because if Bensinger didn't wait until breakfast he must have been heading for Dr. Stokes's home and his talk to Alchisez at once."

"And he didn't get there until after Dr. Stokes left? I don't understand how."

"That's what's important," I said.

"What else do you know?" she asked.

"That Alchisez was interested in the death of Gwynne Ealing as late as last night," I began. "That Dr. Stokes is sure Gwynne Ealing died of natural causes. That Bensinger died on an empty stomach this morning. That Mrs. Pettigrew can't be found, and there are too many derringers going off here and there around town."

"Curiouser and curiouser," said J. D.

"And what I must do," she said, "is run out to the beauty shop."

Then I thought about death, and how doctors are able, or think they're able, to tell how long ago it happened just by poking at a corpse. I made another phone call, to Dr. Stokes's office.

"When will you be through with your work there?" I asked.

"Six o'clock, but don't come over."

Unless I lock up the place patients keep coming in and I never get away. I'm supposed to meet your boss for dinner at seven o'clock."

"Can you come to the office here before that?" I asked him. "I have another aspect of the case that needs your help."

"Must I pay you and then do the work myself? Well, I'll be there by ten minutes after six."

I hadn't set the telephone down before it began ringing again.

"This is Diane Ealing, Jackson," came the reply. "I'm calling you about Mrs. Pettigrew."

"What about her?"

"I've persuaded her to talk to you."

I looked at the time. It was about four-thirty. "Tell her to take your car and drive down here to my office. Get here in an hour. No more, no less."

Chapter 28

The medical examiner was in his office, glad to talk.

Both Bensinger and Alchisez were shot and instantly killed, at approximately the same time. Nine o'clock, a short space of minutes either way, would be the time of their deaths.

"How do you establish that time?" I asked him. "By progress of rigor mortis?"

"The bodies hadn't quite lost all the heat they'd had in life, and there wasn't enough rigor mortis to be noticeable, except to a trained medical man. Only its first traces. Enough to help me judge the time of death—approximately."

"How does a body cool off?" I asked.

"Body temperature is normally around ninety-eight degrees, and you must have known that. With cooler conditions surrounding it, this heat radiates and lessens itself by degrees. Then comes rigor mortis."

"Doctor," I said, "did you check the temperature in that room where the bodies were lying?"

He nodded. "Certainly I did. It was part of my routine examination. And the air was stuffy. I had a sense of heat but it was a false sense. The temperature was seventy-two or three degrees."

"I'd remembered that stuffiness, and my own check of the thermostat that regulated Dr. Stokes's automatic heating system. "Suppose," I said, "that the temperature had been very high up, earlier. Ninety degrees or more, let's say."

"Then of course they'd have cooled more slowly."

"Thanks, and excuse me for butting in," I apologized. "Now about the bullets. Beyond all doubt they killed those men?"

"Beyond a reasonable doubt," he corrected me. "I myself explored the wounds and extracted the bullets with a thumb forceps. As I did in the case of the Ealing shooting."

At my request, he showed me the thumb forceps. "The penetration of the skull weakened the force of the charge that propelled the bullets, and neither one penetrated deeply," he elaborated. "But deeply enough, you may be sure."

"Could you have put the bullets back where you got them, into the wound?"

He peered at me curiously. "May I ask just where these questions are leading?"

"I have only hopes," I said, as I had said to Raniel.

I got back to the office with five minutes to spare. At five-thirty, right on the nose, in walked Mrs. Pettigrew.

I led her into the back office and switched on the light. "Sit down," I told her. "I'm going to start by asking you if you shot Mr. Ealing, your boss; or Alchisez, or a man named Al Bensinger, who were found dead today at the home of Dr. Carl Stokes."

"No," she said. "I didn't. I give you my word. If I dropped down dead this minute, I never did that, or ever thought of doing it."

"You like Mrs. Ealing?"

"Better than any woman I ever knew."

"Then every truth you tell me will help her. That'll make you glad won't it? Now, about Gwynne Ealing. You used to have a job with him."

"I don't see what that has to do with it," she argued.

"I'm beginning to think that it may have a lot to do with it. We're looking for a motive, Mrs. Pettigrew. Think back to when you worked for Gwynne Ealing. About that bad heart of his. When did he find out that his heart was bad?"

"He had that condition when I first came to work for him. He'd been that way for years. Dr. Stokes was looking after him, studying him and treating him all the time."

"Dr. Stokes gave him medicine?"

"All the time. Different kinds. I don't know what they were. Anyway, Mr. Ealing began to get better. He'd talk about his heart improvement to Dr. Stokes and he'd feel better still."

"The night he died—" I began.

"I wasn't there," she

TELLS OF OFFER TO BUY FREEDOM

Lewisburg, Pa., May 13 (AP)—A prosecution witness told a federal court jury trying four men on conspiracy charges last night that he was asked by one of the defendants to put up $2,500 in order to obtain his freedom from prison.

William Recupero, the witness, testified the request was made in June, 1947, by Attorney Ralph G. Mastriani of Scranton while Recupero was being held at the Federal Correctional Institution, Danbury, Conn., in connection with black market sugar stamp dealings.

Recupero, who was scheduled to resume his testimony today, told the jury last night that Mastriani visited him at Danbury with Recupero's brother, Joseph.

Recupero testified that if efforts to free him from prison failed, Mastriani was to return $2,300 of the money and keep $200 for expenses. On trial with Mastriani are Maurice Katz and Attorney Frank J. McDonnell, both of Scranton, and Vincent D'Angelico of New York. They are charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice in the judicial district of middle Pennsylvania.

Dem. Convention PENNSYLVANIA DELEGATES MAY BACK BARKLEY

Philadelphia, July 13 (P) — The 74-vote Pennsylvania delegation was all but aboard the vice presidential bandwagon of Senator Alben W. Barkley in the Democratic convention today.

The Keystone state banner went around the convention hall right after that of Kentucky in a demonstration touched off by Barkley's keynote address last night.

"It was a great speech. It ought to put him in," Mayor David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh told a reporter. "Look at that. He read the whole 24-page address without glasses. He's not old."

Lawrence, Democratic national committeeman, has been an early booster for Barkley for the second place on the party's 1948 ticket.

A growing number of other Keystone state delegates also have indicated they favor the Kentuckian. "I think he will be nominated," commented Judge Ivan J. McKenrick of Ebsburg, Cambria county common pleas judge and delegate-at-large. "It was a wonderful speech."

Rice To Call Caucus
Albert M. Greenfield of Philadelphia, another delegate-at-large, watched the Barkley demonstration with a broad smile. The senator "touched their hearts," he commented.

With Pennsylvania delegates unanimously predicting President Truman's nomination for president on the first ballot, almost all talk in the Keystone state delegation has been about the second place.

Delegation Chairman John S. Rice said he expects to call a caucus to talk the whole thing over some time during the day. Rice explained he will not fix a time until the delegates reassemble for the morning sessions.

Asked where it would be held, Rice said "There are plenty of rooms right here in Convention Hall we could use."

Tentative arrangements for a counting of noses in the delegation yesterday were cancelled by Rice to give party leaders more time to find "who is available" for vice president.

In addition to Barkley, names mentioned as possibilities have included Senator Joseph W. O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Paul V. McNutt, now of New York.

New Dealish candidate to run with the president.

The demonstration even had its effect on Hague, cast as one of the die-hards still looking around for another candidate.

A reporter asked him what he thought of Barkley's chances.

Hague replied, "You're not stupid, are you? You saw that demonstration didn't you?"

Although Hague's Convention Hall meeting with Fitzgerald and Ewing was in McGrath's office, it wasn't attended by the chairman.

McGrath was represented by friends as feeling that he could not afford to sit in on any more conferences about the second place spot until he had final word from Mr. Truman on his choice.

Among those who had a personal interest in what McGrath would have to say were Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Rep. John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, both avowed seekers of the No. 2 place.

Barkley touched off the demonstration for himself with a rip-snorting attack on the Republicans.

Attacks Dewey
He brought the house down with a sally at Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the GOP nominee, who called in his acceptance speech for a house cleaning to sweep the cobwebs out of Washington.

"When the Democratic party took over the government of the United States 16 years ago," the white clad, perspiring Kentuckian roared, "even the spiders were so weak that they could not weave a cobweb in any department of the government of the United States."

The delegates liked it and they stood up and yelled.

When the Senator finished a few minutes later, a palpably manufactured demonstration began for him. A sweating delegate whipped into the air a sign proclaiming "Barkley for Vice President." The march was on to the tune of "My Old Kentucky Home."

But when the band swung into "Stars and Stripes Forever," the delegates picked up enthusiasm. Pretty soon they were shouting and whooping as though they were enjoying the proceedings thoroughly.

Parade To Barkley
Then the Senate's Democratic members began their parade to the platform to clap the sweating Kentuckian on the back and testify to his availability for the vice presidential nomination.

Biffle, busy as a beaver, shuttled one Senator after another up to the microphone.

A lot of them were southerners, demonstrating that the rebellious south—still fighting over the platform's proposed civil rights plank—

Senator Barkley Is Given 28 Minute Ovation After Speech

By HAL BOYLE

Philadelphia, July 13 (P) — Dear Alben did it.

No dark horse but an old and honored wheelhorse of the new deal—Sen. Alben William Barkley—rode to the rescue of the torpid Democratic national convention.

In 68 stirring minutes of old-fashioned sledge hammer oratory last night he welded the quarreling delegates together in a tremendous outburst of party enthusiasm.

They gave him a 28-minute ovation. It was the first time the Democrats had found anything they could agree to cheer—or be cheerful about.

It was an antique bugle Barkley blew and an old but popular tune—the call to battle. It is the call that through the ages has made men bury their differences and fall in line.

Third Keynote Talk

As he stood there, a chunky, powerful man in a white linen suit, he was a kind of elderly David trying to take Barkley and like him.

Typical Comments

Tom Connally (Texas): "The convention wants him."

Olin D. Johnston (S.C.): "He's acceptable to me."

Lister Hill (Ala.): "I don't see how it could be anyone other than Barkley after that demonstration."

Herbert R. O'Connor (Md.): "It's all the way on Barkley. It's on the drum for him."

James E. Murray (Mont.): "I don't have any doubt about it that Barkley will be the nominee."

Senator Millard E. Tydings earlier had announced that he was giving up Maryland's favorite son vote for second place in favor of Barkley.

But the big city leaders were conspicuously absent in the platform demonstration for Barkley.

ing with verbal music to win King Saul—in this case the Democratic convention—back from black depression to hopeful action.

And he sang his summons to political war like a skilled minstrel who knows his tale well. This was the third time in his long career he had sounded the keynote battle cry at a national convention.

He spoke from a rostrum behind which towered the portrait of Franklin Delano Roosevelt—the man he had served so long and who once helped name him as his captain in a letter beginning "Dear Alben."

Like any veteran commander who knows that no army wins by internal weakness, he stressed Democratic claims of achievement rather than convention differences.

His powerful, old-time eloquence hit at the Republican enemy time after time, but he never mentioned together the two key words that have split this convention like a raw, red wound—civil rights.

But he touched upon the issue in interpreting Thomas Jefferson's statement in the Declaration of Independence that among the self-evident truths of mankind is the proposition that all men are created equal.

The delegates cheered repeatedly his praise of the new deal record and his quips at the Republicans.

They laughed uproariously when he jibed that "a bureaucrat is a Democrat who holds some office that a Republican wants" and "the Republican politicians have not been closer to Lincoln in two generations than to quote him."

When he finished with a prayer, the convention erupted in planned and unplanned tribute. The rebel yells broke out, and for nearly half an hour the band played Dixie music, "The Missouri Waltz," and "The Sidewalks of New York."

There was camaraderie there in

Too Much Politics

Glendale, Calif., July 13 (P)—Politics get pretty serious here, too.

Albin Nelson, 42, Democrat, was listening to his party's convention broadcast from Philadelphia last night when a stream of water struck him in the ear.

The sputtering Nelson called police and accused his neighbor, Miss A. C. Madsen, 64, of thrusting her garden hose through his window and letting fly.

Moreover, he said, her radio kept him awake during the Republican convention.

After talking it over, officers said, Nelson decided not to press charges.

Miss Madsen's only comment: "I'm a good Republican."

BLAST, FIRE IN CHAMBERSBURG

Chambersburg, Pa., July 13 (P)—

Gasoline fumes were blamed as the cause of an explosion and fire here yesterday which injured five persons and resulted in $300,000 damage.

"The explosion in the basement of the one-story Pryor Firestone service station touched off a blaze which spread to the adjoining two-story building of the Chambersburg implement company, owned by Frank M. Leidig.

Charles Pryor, owner of the service station, said the blast was probably caused by fumes seeping into the basement from a leak in a fuel storage tank.

Mrs. Helen Wolford, an employee of the service station, was carried to safety by pedestrians. She received a skull fracture and numerous cuts and bruises.

Cleason Shatzer, another service station employee, and Robert Walters, of Shippensburg, a customer in the building at the time, were less seriously hurt. Shatzer was blown out of the building by the force of the blast.

Merle Lehman fell from a ladder and suffered fractured ribs and body bruises. William Jones, Shippensburg, sustained abrasions of the right arm while battling the fire.

Leidig estimated loss to the implement building at $225,000. Pryor placed the service station loss at $75,000.

Driver Pays $50 Fine To Avert Jail

Lloyd G. Hoke, Jr., 19, of East Berlin R. 1, paid a $50 fine in lieu of spending 30 days in the county jail in York police court Saturday after he was found guilty of drunkenness and disorderly conduct involving an auto collision.

The collision occurred in York when Hoke backed his car into an auto owned by Abraham Hochberger, York, while he was attempting to park a car, Patrolman Lawrence W. Roberts told Magistrate Edward L. Showalter.

Hoke, who said he had drunk one bottle of beer after supper, stated that one of the arresting officers had manhandled him and torn his shirt. He was arrested by Officers Roberts and William McIlvain.

Roberts, who reported that the crash occurred about 3 a. m. Saturday, said he had found a bottle of beer in Hoke's car.

All information on the arrest and hearing will be turned over to the district attorney's office. Damage to Hochberger's car was estimated at $100.

The ovation brought to a peak the move to make Senator Barkley—the man who has always tried to put the team above the man—the party's vice presidential candidate.

faced with the job of demobilizing 8,000,000 men the army made few mistakes in proportion to the number of men handled."

Chapter 5

It was true that Hildred was not impressed with material things. She lived much too close to stark reality—poverty, sickness and misery—in her daily work. But she would not have been human had she not found herself a trifle awed when she was ushered into the enormous reception hall of the great house in which Lucien lived.

The interior was like a movie script; the floors black and white marble, walls hung with priceless tapestries, the swinging chandeliers, glittering dazlingly with crystal pendants. The furnishings and ornaments were museum pieces and collectors' items.

She saw Mr. Lanier coming to greet her, as she silently handed the hovering butler the wrap she had removed. "Well, here you are!" Her host's manner was more cordial than she had remembered. His dark eyes were coolly polite, but his smile was almost friendly. "I wondered if you would come, Miss McNaughten. I trust you are feeling entirely recovered from your accident?"

Hildred murmured that she was feeling very well, though at the moment, she was not.

"Will you come this way?" he was saying courteously. "I thought we would dine in my upstairs apartment. The rest of the rooms are not all in readiness for occupancy—the house has been closed, you know, since Grandfather died, and I thought I would not trouble to use them until my mother joins me."

Then she would not have to meet the Countess; that was a relief. She followed, silently, across the marble floors, up the curving stairway. She was reaching, rapidly, a decision. She had been foolish enough to come, but she would not stay.

There was an open fireplace with a few logs crackling merrily, as the autumn night was cool; before it, there was a table set for two, with beautifully appointed silver and tall, lighted candles, and a centerpiece of flowers.

"I hope you will make yourself comfortable," Lucien said, waving a hand toward a small brocade divan. With the other hand he pulled a rope cord that would summon a servant. "What would you like to drink—we must drink a toast to your speedy recovery."

Hildred said she would take a glass of sherry. She sat down on the divan. She was thinking, when the servant responded so promptly, bearing a silver tray with bottles and glasses, that if she told her host she would not stay it would only add to the pictures he already had of her. He would think she expected him to take advantage of this intimate situation, as Mamie had hinted darkly, a man of his station might well do.

"To your recovery—and good health!" he said now, having presented her with a small glass holding the wine and touching it with one of his own into which he had poured Scotch and soda. "To a very beautiful young woman," he added, with a smile that held much more warmth than the others.

Hildred said, speaking quietly, "You don't mean that, Mr. Lanier. You don't mean any of this. I don't know why you asked me here. Unless it was to amuse yourself, since you must be bored and lonely in such ornate surroundings."

Lucien Lanier put his glass down, without drinking from it; his expression was much the same as when he had stood, looking after her, that first day they had met. He said, "I believe you mean that! But you are mistaken. I asked you because I wanted to know you better. Though I will admit I may have behaved in such a manner as to make you believe the worst of me."

"I did not say that," Hildred returned, her eyes not wavering before his steady regard. "I don't think the worst of you, at all. I merely think you invited me on an impulse, which you since may have regretted. And that it amuses you to pretend an interest you do not feel. Why should you care to know me better, Mr. Lanier. We could not possibly have anything in common ever. You think, because of the way we met that I am some sort of cheap, melodramatic, little fool. I've seen it in your face, your manner—it is you who think the worst of me."

"If I did—and I do not plead guilty to such harsh accusations as those—you certainly have disproved it."

She had stood up toward the end of this speech, without thinking where it was leading her, so that now they were face to face, though the man was a head taller than she. His dark eyes looked deeply into hers, long and silently. She saw things in them she had not seen before, a weariness that could only come from more than a surfeit of worldly things, almost a despair that might have been caused by the unhappiness she had felt must abide in the walls of such a house as his. He said, "Some of the things you said are true—were true, I should say, I did ask you on an impulse, not knowing why. But if you will honor me by staying, I give you my word you will never be sorry."

There was sincerity in his voice so evident that Hildred could not question it. But it was not that that caused her to decide to remain. It was that glimpse of something hidden in his dark eyes, something that had caused her to feel a momentary flash of pity. For she had seen that this man was not happy; she had seen in his eyes a despairing resignation. She could recognize that look, having encountered it so often in her work. She had not expected to encounter it in such surroundings as these.

She said, "I'll be glad to stay if you really want me to."

"I cannot think of anything I want more," he told her solemnly. Without another word Hildred turned and sat down once more on the sofa. She picked up her glass, she smiled over its rim. "Shall we drink that toast then? If not that one—to me—to both of us—and to a better understanding."

He instantly took up his glass again, raising it to his lips. His eyes smiled back at her, a smile that held real warmth and not the slightest sign of amusement.

"I don't believe there will ever be misunderstanding between us again," he told her, and in such a way that she saw he meant it. "There need not be, between friends—and I believe we are going to be friends, Miss McNaughten."

Chapter 6

Lanier stood by the mantelpiece now, one arm resting on it, his face lighted by its soft glow so that the harsh lines were shadowed, the cynical ones about his handsome mouth, the intent furrow in his forehead. But it was his manner that had changed most; it was as if he had thrown aside a garment he wore for protection, a garment of worldly bitterness as if he had tasted all life's joys and sorrows and disillusionment.

He could be two people, Hildred thought—human, sincere, unaffected—or the man she first had thought him, arrogant and intolerant. She said, "I ought not have spoken as I did. It was very rude of me."

"It was very honest," he corrected. "Honesty is something I esteem and seldom come in contact with. Especially with a woman as young and lovely as you. And in that you were mistaken—I do think you beautiful."

"Shall we dine?" her host asked, offering Hildred his arm with as much decorum as if the room were full of other guests.

The food, of course, was so excellent that Hildred felt it might have been prepared in some other world. There were so many courses, each served so perfectly, all containing such delicate and appetizing flavors that they were more than just steaming soup and entree of chilled shrimp, chicken and lobster, greens and salad, and dessert. Yet she did not enjoy them as she might have felt less constrained. For throughout the entire meal two servants stood behind each chair, while two others brought in silver platters, or removed them. Four people to wait upon two!

The elaborate meal finally terminated, her host asked if she would like to hear some music. Hildred hoped he would play—there was a beautiful grand in the big room, but instead he got out some recordings.

Hildred enjoyed the selections, but she found her attention caught by—and wandering back to—a certain, outstanding portrait that hung above the grand piano. It was the portrait of a girl, an extraordinarily attractive girl, if she could not be called beautiful. She had flaming red hair and odd green eyes and a small, pointed face. It was not a happy face—maybe that was why Hildred kept looking at it. There appeared the same haunted look that she had glimpsed in Lucien Lanier's dark eyes when he had said there was no hope of his finding what his heart might seek because he was a Lanier.

Could the girl of the portrait be a Lanier, too? There seemed a vague resemblance beside that strange expression. And the background was this very room in which Hildred sat now, the same yellow sofa on which she had been seated.

However her curiosity must remain unanswered, as of course she could not possibly ask any questions about the red-headed girl. Indeed they did not seem to get back again to that brief intimacy they had shared for a short while.

When she realized the hour must be getting late Hildred said she must leave. "It has been a very pleasant evening," she said; "I've enjoyed it all so much." She was surprised to find that that was true; it had been so restful here in these lovely surroundings, the cheerful fire, the soft music. "I'm a working girl, you know," her one dimly flashed provocatively as she smiled, "I have to be up early in the morning."

"I'll have Robin bring the car to the door in a few minutes," Lucien returned promptly. Apparently it did not occur to him to offer to drive her back into town himself. Maybe, Hildred reflected, he was so used to being waited upon in every way that he did not even drive! "It has been pleasant," he agreed. "And it is only a beginning. Hildred—you won't mind if I call you that, now that we are friends, will you?"

So he had not forgotten that brief intimacy. She said she would not mind at all. But she was not so sure about this being a beginning; though, of course, this she did not say.

Again he seemed to read her thoughts. He said, "I meant that, about a beginning—as I told you I don't believe that you do, either. You remember, too, that you said you knew I must often be lonely—so you see you must not only come again, but often!" His smile was one of the rare kind that lighted up his face so that it seemed he was that other, hidden person, seldom revealed to anyone. The person he might have been, no doubt, had he not been born to such great wealth.

Hildred had not counted on letting herself in for quite so much. But it was true she did not give friendship lightly, either. And, once more, she was touched by a sort of boyish eagerness behind his words, though it was an eagerness she knew he would not allow many people to uncover. It was almost a hunger—the sort of hunger for affection and understanding—that she often had encountered among the people with whom she worked.

That was why she held out her hand, impulsively, in saying good-night now. "Of course I shall come again. I shall be glad to Mr. Lanier's sign of amusement."

"Mr. Lanier!" His smile was indeed boyish now, and teasing; his handclasp was warm and altogether friendly.

"Lucien, then." It was not as difficult to say as she would have imagined, though a few hours ago she could not possibly have imagined herself calling him that.

Hildred felt, being driven back into town in the big car by Robin, that a new chapter was opening up in her life.

Chapter 7

Mamie had advised Hildred to "do something" about Randy and Hildred herself had decided it was time she made Randy wake up.

At the clinic the following morning Hildred learned that the young doctor had left town to be gone for several days. He had decided to take the child he was to have operated on the day before to Atlanta. It was to be not only a delicate operation but something in the way of an experiment.

Hildred knew that if the operation was a success, it would bring Randy the acclaim and attention he deserved.

"When do you expect your young man back?" her mother asked, when Randy had been gone almost a week. "Have you heard from him, dear?"

Hildred said she had not had any word. She had not expected any, though she did think Randy might have dropped a card.

"I'm not at all sure," she said, smiling across the little living room. "That Randy is my young man. As the saying goes he has never declared himself. Maybe he never will. Randy is so absorbed in his work that he is blind to everything and everyone else. And although I could care for him a great deal I am not sure I would want to be married to a man who scarcely knew I existed."

She said this because she knew there was no use, ever, in pretending with her mother. They were too close.

"There could be worse things than that," Mrs. McNaughten put aside her needlepoint a moment. "I believe, unless you do something about it, you will go on waiting another two or three, or even many more years, for Randy to declare himself."

"Oh, I realize it all right!" Hildred's smile was rueful. She was stretched out on the couch, her uniform discarded for a comfortable housecoat, her shoes kicked off. "I have determined to do something about it, Mummy. And in short order, too."

"Is that why you have become friends with Mr. Lanier?" Her mother's eyes were back on her sewing once more but the question was more direct than usual. "Of course you realize, too, my dear—at least I hope you do!—that a man like that would never have anything more in mind than friendship."

"You are not the first to warn me about that," she stretched and sat up, propping one elbow with a couple of pillows.

"I am relieved to know that you know that," her mother replied. She had been afraid that even a girl as sensible as Hildred might easily be swept off her feet by the display of wealth that surrounded all the Laniers.

Mrs. McNaughten clipped a thread, reaching for the next color. "No doubt his cousin, because she is related, is considered a suitable match. A young man who has received such a large inheritance—many millions—would have to be very careful as to whom he married. He would have to be careful even as to whom he chose for friends."

Hildred agreed that that was so. Lucien had said as much when he had told her, on her second visit to the great house, that the red-headed girl in the portrait was his fiancée and his cousin. He had said, "It has always been understood that we would marry." And it was because of the way he had said it, as such a matter-of-fact statement, that Hildred had thought he could not be in love with Dodo.

"Mamie says there is no such thing as true love," Hildred said now, her blue eyes dreamy. "I suppose she is right. Yet I hate to think so I guess every girl dreams of being loved just for herself, romantically, yes, even desperately. Does that seem like asking too much? Does it seem terribly silly to you, darling?"

Her mother shook her head. "I think not," she said in her gentle voice. "Your father and I had such a love, darling. We were not two persons—but one. And our love lives

GOVERNOR SETS EXECUTION DATE

Harrisburg, May 13 (AP)—Gov. James H. Duff today fixed the week beginning Monday, June 28, for the execution of George Henry Chapman, Potter county's "pretty please" slayer.

The state Supreme Court last month upheld the death sentence imposed on Chapman for the murder of his wife, Mrs. Minnie Chapman. She was shot to death last August 10 in the one-room shack where they lived in Bingham township, Potter county.

The governor's office said that Chapman may seek commutation of his death sentence from the state pardons board at its meeting next month.

At the trial, commonwealth evidence included a statement which District Attorney Walter P. Wells said Chapman, a woodchopper, signed. In it, Chapman was quoted as saying he had asked his wife to bring him a clock, and, when she demanded that he say "pretty please," he pulled the trigger of a shotgun.

Chapman's defense was based on a plea of intoxication.

EAGLES' STEWARD KILLED
Waynesboro, Pa., May 13 (AP)—Clair P. Morgal, 58-year-old steward of the Waynesboro Eagles club, died of crushed chest today two hours after his automobile collided with a parked tractor-trailer truck here. Morgal's light sedan jammed into the rear end of truck, loaded with concrete pipe.

on, even after death.

"Is that our downstairs bell, dear? Would you mind answering? I can't go the way I'm dressed. I hope it's only one of the neighbors."

Mrs. McNaughten put down her sewing and started to the door. "I'll say you've gone to bed," she said.

Her mother came hurrying back into the living room with consternation written on her face. "My dear," she said, "it's Mr. Lanier—and I found I just could not tell even such a white fib to him—so I'm afraid he is coming up."

"Lucien! Why should he come here? We are having dinner again tomorrow evening. . . I'm afraid he will have to take me just as he finds me, there won't be time to spruce up."

Even as Hildred said this last there was a knock at the door, and she went to open it.

"This is a surprise!" Hildred's smile was warm and welcoming. "Won't you come in, Lucien?" She held the door wide. Her mother had sat down to resume her needlework once more.

"I hope I am not intruding," Lucien said; he wore that boyish, eager look. "I just had to stop. I was in town, and, well, believe it or not, I was so lonely I thought I would go slightly mad. Then I thought of you—and that maybe you wouldn't mind—"

"Of course not!" Hildred drew him on into the room, shutting the door. "I'm so glad you did. I want you to know my mother."

She was glad and proud to see that her mother also accepted this somewhat odd visit as if it were an everyday occurrence. Just as she accepted Lucien himself as if he were any ordinary young man who might have dropped in to chat with her daughter.

Speed Issuance Of Jobless Pay

Harrisburg, May 13 (AP)—The distribution of jobless benefit checks has been speeded up by as much as two to three days under a new system inaugurated by the Commonwealth.

A. J. Caruso, executive director of the state Bureau of Employment and Unemployment compensation, said the new method involves bypassing local employment offices in giving out the checks.

Previously checks were mailed from headquarters here to local offices. From there, they were then mailed to claimants as a protection measure.

At the same time, Caruso said job placements so far this year by the state employment service now total almost 74,000 and the monthly rate is still climbing. Caruso disclosed that 29,800 men and women were placed in jobs last month.

Milk Production In Pa. Up; Eggs Drop

Harrisburg, May 13 (AP)—Milk production continued to climb in Pennsylvania last month, the state Agriculture department said today.

On the other hand, the output of eggs started a downward trend a month earlier than last year.

The total milk output for April was 479,000,000 pounds, five per cent above March. Reduced farm flocks produced 328,000,000 eggs last month, 5,000,000 less than in March.

Meanwhile, the department reported the outlook for Pennsylvania fruit crops this season is "very good and considerably better than last year" despite a series of freeze scares in April.

AD, FOR A LOST HEAD—Authorities at Florence, Italy, posted an advertisement (lower right) for the return of the head (picture at upper right) of the statue of "Primavera" (Spring). The head was last seen in mud of Arno river after wartime artillery duel between German and Italian partisans. Officials assume that someone took the head for a souvenir.

day night, September 2; round dances Friday night, square dances Saturday night and a Labor Day celebration with the county convention and parade Monday afternoon and round dances in the evening.

The three committees of the Gettysburg department, the carnival, parade and convention committees, will work together on plans for the event.

Secretary Raymond Menges reported receipt of a donation of $10 from C. L. Butt for services at a fire at Green Gables and $30 from St. James church where firemen granted use of the ladder truck to paint the cross and cornice on the bell tower Wednesday. The painting is being done by a Connelville, Pa., firm.

An invitation to take part in the firemen's parade at Irishtown June 12, at 5:30 p.m. was accepted. Fire Chief James A. Aumen and Assistant Chiefs Donald Jacobs and Donald McSherry will be in charge of arrangements.

The company also received an invitation to attend the three-day carnival of the Bendersville Fire company August 5, 6 and 7. Reports of Gene Sickles, equipment foreman and fire marshal were received. Harold Culp was named representative of the company on a joint committee to meet at the Elks home May 20 to make plans for the observance of Flag Day.

The June meeting of the firemen will be held at the Firemen's Retreat in the mountains. George Bushman, Ray Culp, Francis Grot, Billie Shearer and Horace Bender were appointed as a committee to have charge of refreshments at this meeting.

TUG OF WAR IN BERLIN NOW AT CRITICAL STAGE

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

The tug of war between the Bolsheviks and the Democracies over Berlin has produced a tautness which can't long continue without something snapping.

The question, of course, is what sort of break it will be. The conservative London Daily Mail, for example, declares that "This has been the most critical week-end of its kind since September, 1939" (the beginning of World War II).

The Mail says if Russia ignores the western power demand that the Soviet food blockade of Berlin be ended immediately "the situation will deteriorate to the point where an explosion becomes almost inevitable." The conservative Daily Graphic likewise asserts that "this may be a fateful week for Britain and the world."

Need Firm Stand

These serious editorial estimates have coincided with hurried conferences among American, British and French officials. An authoritative source in London said Britain had sent considerable numbers of new troops to western Germany because of the tension. A spokesman for the British war office denied this, whereupon the authoritative source reiterated the statement.

Meantime William H. Draper, U. S. undersecretary of war, who is in Turkey, says the situation in Berlin cannot be accepted. He told reporters the western powers are and must be in unanimous agreement on a firm stand.

All that does add up to a grim picture, and we can agree that these are fateful days. However, while fully appreciating the dangers, I think we are safe in saying that we may expect the situation to be ironed out without resort to armed conflict, at least in the near future.

Russia's Aim

True, the roll of the drums of war isn't so loud in America as it is in Europe which provides the battlefields for the global upheavals. Still I don't believe we are over confident in thinking that the problem can be solved without burning more powder.

The Bolsheviks claim that the western allies have no rights in Berlin. This claim isn't true but, irrespective of that, the Reds can't make it stick by the barbaric scheme of torturing 2,400,000 helpless civilians with starvation. The world as a whole won't stand for it and, as remarked in a previous column, the application of economic and diplomatic sanctions on Russia by the United Nations could be a terrible punishment.

What Russia is aiming at in the long run is control of all Germany, including the wealth of the great industrial Ruhr. The struggle over Berlin is just a stepping stone to the larger ambition. If Russia could Sovietize the Reich and bring it completely under Moscow's domination, then she would have much reason to boast that she had taken a long step towards the conquest of all Europe.

BUMPER CORN CROP IS SEEN

Harrisburg, July 13 (AP)—Pennsylvania farmers may harvest a bumper corn crop of 63,190,000 bushels this year, nearly six million over 1947, says the State Agriculture department.

If the estimate proves accurate, this will be the fifth largest corn crop in the history of the Commonwealth.

Meanwhile, Miles Horst, state agriculture secretary, said the bumper crop should ultimately bring a change in feed prices. He added, however, that any grain price decline may be offset by continuing advances in farm operation costs.

Estimates of other 1948 crops set the potato yield at 19,075,000 bushels, one million above last year. The tobacco crop of 57,770,000 pounds is less than one million under 1947 production. While hay at 3,388,000 tons will be 263,000 tons less than in 1947.

An the fruit scene, the department predicted a drop in both apple and grape production this year, but a small increase in peaches.

The department estimated the apple yield at 5,876,000 bushels, a drop of 736,000 from the 1947 yield. Killing frosts at blossom time and presence of stab disease were blamed by the department on the decline. The grape crop was estimated at 16,800 tons, 1,200 below 1947.

The peach estimate was placed at 2,124,000 bushels, about 200,000 better than last year.

TO STUDY MILK PRICES

Harrisburg, July 13 (AP)—The state Milk Control Commission will hold a hearing in Pittsburgh August 3 to consider a possible revision of milk prices for the area. The Dairyman's Cooperative Sales Association and the Greater Pittsburgh Milk Dealers Association, who petitioned for the hearing, are expected to ask for a milk price boost to take effect for the short supply season next fall.

Gettysburg Country Club, With Picturesque 9-Hole Course, Regulation Pool, Pro Shop, Locker Room And Club House, Is Completed

in laying out the course and planting and fertilizing it. Soil conservation experts chose the dam site and aided in its construction.

28 Incorporators

The Gettysburg Country Club was actually born on July 18, 1947, when 28 incorporators formed the Gettysburg Development Corporation. They purchased 116 acres of land from Clyde D. and Mary C. Berger, land which was once known widely throughout the eastern United States as the Springs hotel, or Katalysine Springs. Later the property on the Lincoln highway known as "The Terrace" was purchased from Samuel Reed, and included with the previously acquired land and buildings.

The Development incorporators were C. A. Willis, Barton H. Poth, Dr. Chester G. Crist, Dr. Walter S. Mountain, Dr. Roy W. Gifford, Glenn L. Bream, Wilmer E. Roth, Richard A. Brown, John D. Teeter, George M. Zerling, Dr. Ralph D. Wickerham, John A. Hauser, Donald M. Swope, Joseph E. Codori, J. Herbert Raymond, Dr. Bruce N. Wolff, J. Milton Bender, Dr. J. C. Donley, Dr. Fred B. Bryson, Walter H. Doud, Nevaeh A. Crouse, Dr. Raymond P. Sheely, Ralph Z. Oyler, Richard C. Warren, Charles H. Smith, Donald J. McPherson, Jr., and Eva M. Pape.

The first officers were: Richard A. Brown, president; Glenn L. Bream, vice president; John A. Hauser, secretary; and Ralph Z. Oyler, treasurer. Members of the board of directors were these officers and John D. Teeter, Barton H. Poth, Joseph E. Codori, Dr. Roy W. Gifford, Nevaeh A. Crouse, Wilmer

E. Roth, Dr. R. D. Wickerham and George M. Zerling.

Country Club Directors

New directors of the Country club, elected at a meeting held June 24, are: John A. Hauser, Glenn L. Bream, Dr. J. Walter Coleman, George M. Zerling, Wilmer E. Roth, Henry T. Bream, Joseph E. Codori, Richard A. Brown, Jacob Britcher, Ralph Z. Oyler and Edgar K. Markley.

The new officers of the Country club, elected July 8, are: Richard A. Brown, president; Glenn L. Bream, vice president; Ralph Z. Oyler, treasurer, and James M. G. Sneringer, secretary. Committees will be appointed later.

To date, $110,000 has been spent on the country club buildings and layout. One of the first jobs was the building of a soil conservation dam which had impounded 2,000,000 gallons of water in a 2½-acre "lake" which has been stocked with large mouth bass and whose waters are being used for a $20,000 swimming pool between the club house and the golf course and to water the greens and tees.

Membership of 111

After completion of the course and facilities, the country club was formed, which leases all the property from the development company. The club now has 111 members.

The property embraces approximately 158 acres, extending a mile from the Lincoln highway to the Old Mill road, and bounded by government property on both sides.

The property is approximately three-quarters of a mile in width, and has a frontage on the Lincoln highway of 580 feet. A "border" has been left around the golf course on the south and west of 200 feet, which will be used later for residential development. Lots will be sold and homes erected in one of the most scenic spots in this section.

Regulation Pool

The former "Terrace" is now the main clubhouse, where all social functions will be held. The stone building which was formerly the bottling works for Katalysine Springs, has been remodeled for men's locker rooms in one end and women's in the other, and contains a modern pro golf shop.

Between the two buildings and directly in back of the clubhouse is the new 82.6 by 30 foot, regulation A. A. U. size swimming pool, with A. A. U. high and low diving boards.

The pool, according to officers of the club, represents the finest sanitary engineering possible, and more than conforms with all state sanitary requirements. The chlorination and filtering plant is located below the ground level at the west end of the pool. There will also be a wading pool for younger children, and the entire surroundings are being landscaped and terraced.

Lifeguards At Pool

Jack Shainline, a member of the coaching staff at Gettysburg college, is in charge of the lifeguards at the pool, and will give swimming instructions, thus assuring parents of safety for their children while in the pool.

The club and golf course occupy a site that is not only a scenic "gem," but historically noteworthy. Other clubs may boast of golf played above

BOARD NOT TO

Mt. Joy pupils in grades nine through 12 who desire to attend Gettysburg high school as was done in past years, and be it resolved further that in the event the Littlestown joint school system does not permit the ninth grade high school pupils to attend Gettysburg high school during the school year 1948-49, the Gettysburg joint school system shall be obliged to deny admission to any pupils from the Mt. Joy school district.

Set Decision Date

The Gettysburg board said it plans to send copies of the resolution to the Littlestown joint board, to all of the directors in Mt. Joy township and to the parents or guardians of all the youngsters involved.

Littlestown will meet this evening and it is expected that a copy of the Resolution will be presented to the board at that time.

Littlestown was given until July 20 to decide whether it wants to send all Mt. Joy students who want to come here, or withdraw all of its students from Gettysburg according to the resolution. The need for a decision by that time is to permit the Gettysburg system to "be fair with other districts," Superintendent Dr. Lloyd C. Keefeauver pointed out.

Superintendent Keefeauver was directed by the joint board to contact the Lower Adams jointure to see whether it wishes to continue in effect the handling of the seventh and eighth grades and high school students from Straban township in the New Oxford schools, a system started last year.

The joint board voted to permit Franklin township to send its high school students to Gettysburg high school as it has done in previous years.

The clouds, in mountain settings or drenched by ocean spray, but the Gettysburg Country club offers golf on a battlefield. In building the course, hundreds of bullets were dug up, relics of the three-day fight between Union and Confederate forces here on July 1, 2 and 3, 1863.

In addition to the 75 building lots which almost completely surround the course and are reached either from the Lincoln highway or the Fairfield road, there is a well-developed bridge path around the course.

Non-Profit Project

The golf course lake lies in the greenward, presided over by a wild duck which has adopted the lake as its home. The course is championship size, 6,046 yards in length, with a men's par of 70 and women's par of 72. The longest hole is No. 3, 555 yards and the shortest, an easy iron shot, No. 2, 155 yards. Near the pro shop is a practice green.

Sam Mellon, the golf pro, was formerly at the Oakmont Country club, Pittsburgh, and Overlook Country club, Lancaster. He will serve all members and guests with the best in golf equipment and give lessons.

The Gettysburg Country club is a non-profit community project. Residents of Gettysburg and vicinity need no invitation to become members. Anyone may make application, through any of the officers or members of the club.

"It was conceived as a family club," Mr. Brown said. "It took more than eight months of planning before the final organization meeting was held."

Memberships

There are several types of memberships, the Class A, which provides for every member of a family; junior membership, designed particularly for young married couples under 30 years of age; single memberships for both men and women, and memberships for out-of-town residents who live beyond a 20-mile radius. Initiation fee and yearly dues may be paid quarterly.

All members will enjoy guest privileges, that is, they may entertain guests from beyond this 20-mile limit on the course, in the swimming pool or the clubhouse, at any time.

They may also entertain local guests not more than twice a month. In addition, membership cards of other country clubs will be honored and visitors may play golf or swim at any time by paying the regular fee.

Millhimes, $2,100; Dorothy Spriggs, $2,150 and Elsie B. Wolf, $2,100. M. Kathryn Wagaman was named school nurse at $2,450 per year.

About 26 of the teachers will be used in the Gettysburg schools. The board decided to make changes at the Lincoln school which will permit additional students to be taught there. It also plans to bring the seventh and eighth grades from Cumberland township into the Gettysburg schools. Possibly two additional teachers will be needed in Gettysburg to take care of that addition to the local schools.

Award Contracts

The contract to furnish paint for the high school building was given to George M. Zerling at a bid of $3.95 per gallon of Sherwin-Williams paint in five gallon containers. Zerling was the lowest of six bids. Harvey J. Bushman was given the contract to do the painting. His bid of $598.50 was the lowest among four.

Bills totalling $4,370.35, mostly for coal, were approved. The board voted to place $10,120 in the joint treasury to pay bills and the salaries of teachers for July and August. The $10,000 was divided as follows: Gettysburg, $7,480; Cumberland, $1,012; Freedom, $286; Highland, $275 and Straban, $1,067. All of the boards agreed to pay their share this week.

A bid of $15.75 per ton for coal from Fred Williams was accepted.

Approve Budget

The budget, of $245,876.24, tentatively adopted at the last session of the joint board, was given final approval.

Three schools will be closed. They are Round Top in Cumberland and Glenwood and Church in Highland township.

The transportation committee was authorized to make contracts for bus routes and directed to have the transportation system, as far as possible, worked out prior to the next meeting of the joint board on August 9. A meeting of the transportation committee and secretaries of the boards was set for Thursday evening, July 22, at 8:30 o'clock at the high school.

George Raffensperger, of the property committee, reported plans to repair a fallen section of the wall along the Tiber underneath the lawn at Meade school.

Tells Carriers Gas Tax Must Be Raised

Reading, Pa., July 13 (AP)—A state Highways Department official says increased state gasoline taxes are needed to provide for construction of additional highways.

Charles H. Buckius, assistant chief engineer of the department told delegates to the 46th annual state convention of the Pennsylvania Rural Letter Carriers' Association yesterday the cost of road construction has tripled since 1920.

It cost $50,000 a mile to build a road in Pennsylvania after World War I, Buckius said, but today it costs the state $150,000 per mile.

Best Dressed Jurist Arrested For Fraud

Newark, N. J., July 13 (AP)—Police Judge P. James Pellecchia, Jr., was arrested today in connection with a $630,000 shortage at the Columbus Trust company, where he is vice president and counsel.

State Banking Commissioner John J. Dickerson quoted the judge, named last year as the nation's best dressed jurist, as admitting "sole responsibility" for the shortage.

The commissioner, who announced the arrest, said Pellecchia related he "lost all of the money gambling on horses" and it was "nothing to lose $5,000 or $6,000 a week on the horses."

Dickerson did not announce the specific charge against the judge.

Dickerson said the Newark judge had covered up the shortages by "the loaning of money on fictitious mortgages" over a period of 2½ years.

Mrs. Scharf, Mrs. Coleman and Mrs. R. S. Saby reported on the state federation sessions early this month at Harrisburg. They said the universal military training resolution rejected here was passed in an amended form by the state group. They told of a panel discussion led by Governor Duff and Judge Grover Lader on the topic "Pennsylvania Has Everything."

Mrs. Scharf called the attention of the club to the scrap book on club activities and publicity prepared by Mrs. C. H. Heldt. The scrapbook was displayed at the Harrisburg meeting.

Of the Harrisburg session, Mrs. Scharf said: "America's position in world affairs and whether the future holds world peace or world war were the subjects that dominated the convention."

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear father and husband, Daniel A. Goodermuth, who passed away July 13, 1947, a year ago today.

Your gentle face and patient smile With sadness we recall. You had a kindly word for each And died beloved by all.

The voice is mute and still the heart That loved us well and true. Ah, bitter was the trial to part From one so good as you.

You are not forgotten, loved one, Nor will you ever be. As long as life and memory last We will remember thee.

We miss you now, our hearts are sore. As time goes by we miss you more. Your loving smile, your gentle face No one can fill your vacant place. Sadly missed and never forgotten by wife and children.

Referring to the known and unknown dead buried at Gettysburg, Father Keller said "they died to save the union, and left an inheritance for those who followed. "We would not want to live in any country but America," he said. "When we are born, each one of us has a right guaranteed to us. The Declaration of Independence is the foundation of all our freedoms. "Safeguard Principles" "God gave us our rights through the Declaration. We should safeguard the principles upon which our country was founded," he added. H. J. Adams, Centennial chairman of the yearbook committee, reported progress on this publication. McKenna showed safety films, stressed the number of accidents which occur on holidays, cited figures of the recent Fourth of July fatalities on the highways and pointed out the large number of accidents and dangers from "cowboy" drivers. The next quarterly meeting will be held October 11 at East Berlin.

Important Facts About Ants

Ants are the most thoroughly publicized of all insects. They are Biblical synonyms of industry and thrift. Their colony life is often described as an example of successful communism. The entomologist studies them to learn more about their remarkable social and organizational habits. Archeologists say ants lived millions of years ago just as they do today—the least changing, perhaps, of all known forms of life. Yet, there are numerous erroneous theories about these insects and few persons know how to control them in pantries, kitchens, lawns and gardens. Here, therefore, are a few brief facts about ants, offered to enable gardeners and housewives to combat these industrious little invaders more successfully.

Rarely do ants attack or injure plants. In fact, they feed directly on few kinds of plants. But in most cases where ants are seen on plants, they are there to obtain (1) The fermented sap from plant wounds; (2) To feed on the decaying tissues of plants suffering from decays or other diseases; (3) To consume the sweet secretion of certain species of aphids, often called honeydew.

Perhaps the greatest injury ants inflict on growing plants is to burrow and thereby aerate the soil around the roots. Of course, they are a nuisance when numerous on vegetable or ornamental plants.

Where ants visit plants to feed on the honeydew secreted by aphids, the complete extermination of the aphids will solve the ant problem. In these cases the ants have previously carried the parent aphids to the plants and established them there, in much the same manner that a person takes a milk cow to pasture and protects her in return for the milk she gives.

If ants are seen on such plants as cabbage, they may be attracted there because the plants are infected with black rot, root rot or similar diseases which result in decays that emit an odor. Of course, the ants are in no way responsible for the disease and their presence on the plants is but a bit of evidence that the disease is present. Often they serve in a similar capacity where decays affect trees and shrubs.

Perhaps the ant is more annoying in the kitchen and pantry than in any other of its invading roles. Not only does it contaminate and feed on exposed foods, but it often causes food losses by falling into open vessels. The indoor ant problem is more difficult to solve because the nests are more inaccessible.

In all cases ant control calls for first emphasis on destruction of the colony rather than on spasmodic and sporadic attacks against the individual insects, as so many persons attempt.

If the colony cannot be located, then poisoning of the individual ants is the only major means of combat. Use of both the individual and colony combat measures is usually advisable. Hot water poured (boiling) into ant burrows is effective. There are several excellent poisons easily prepared at home. The editor will gladly furnish readers a free copy of our "12 Effective Ways To Combat Ants." Merely enclose a 3-cent stamp with name and address for this timely information.

Locate the nest. This is the first major principle in war on ants. It is particularly important where wholesale combat is necessary in lawns and gardens. Keeping all attracting sweet and greasy foods and wastes tightly covered in the kitchen will help prevent these pests from invading the premises.

WHITE GRUBS AS CROP PESTS

White grubs, commonly called grub worms, are the young or larvae of the well known June Bug. They damage a wide group of garden and field crops, feed on several ornamental plants and lawn grass, and in general constitute one of the most difficult of all insect enemies to control after they become numerous. It is important that every farmer and gardener know the simple life cycle of this pest in order to understand effective measures for its control.

The female June beetle deposits her eggs in or on the soil in late May or early June. The tiny white grubs hatching from these feed on decayed and living vegetation in the top soil until winter approaches, causing but minor damages in this first season of their 3-year cycle. They burrow into the ground before cold weather comes and survive until the next spring when their season of maximum destructiveness begins. It is during this second summer that they damage corn, potatoes, strawberries and many ornamentals, also grasses and various vegetables.

The second autumn they burrow deeper into the soil and resume their feeding activities in late May or early June of the third summer. But this year they feed lightly until about the middle of July when they become dormant and pupate. The following spring the egg-laying beetle emerges again.

After farmers learn accurately these cycles they may employ at more effective cropping scheme to keep white grubs under control. For example, plowing infested land deeply from late September until the middle of October of the second year in the cycle destroys many of the grubs. Or again, plowing such land in early June of the third year is an effective means of combat.

Pasturing hogs on grub-infested land will help reduce the grub population either during the second or more efficient scheme is to plan the early third summer. But perhaps a crop rotation so infested fields are in clover during the third summer of the cycle.

At least 98 species of birds feed on white grubs, including the hated crow. And what every farmer should file away among his permanent records of useful facts is this: Skunks, moles, opossums, and toads wage destructive war against grubs. Most upland game birds are also foes of the grub. Here is a sound reason, among several reasons, why farmers should protect skunks and toads from careless and thoughtless persons who kill them.

White grubs may be killed in lawns by much the same treatment that is recommended for killing grubs of the Japanese beetle—1 pound of lead arsenate (mixed with dry sand) and strewn over every 100 square feet. This should be watered into the soil along about the middle of May or a little later. One such application will usually retain its effectiveness for four or five years.

Farmers and gardeners should avoid planting such crops as strawberries after a heavy sod has been turned under. Interested readers are invited to write the editor for additional help in this problem.

Convict Carlisle Youth Of Assault

Carlisle, Pa., May 13 (AP) — An 18-year-old Carlisle youth was convicted by a Cumberland county jury of assaulting four-year-old Bonnie Lou Schaffer, of Mechanicsburg.

The jury returned a guilty verdict against Carl Nolf yesterday after deliberating 40 minutes. Sentence was not imposed.

Nolf, a former pin-boy in a bowling alley here, was charged with assaulting the child last October while she slept in a car on a parking lot here. Nolf later enlisted in the army.

During the trial, Edgar E. Newlin, criminal investigator for the army, testified that Nolf admitted the attack on the child and signed a written confession. Two state policemen also testified that Nolf had made a written confession of the crime.

Nolf told the jury that he signed the confession because "a voice, the voice of my uncle, Ernest Nolf, told me to confess the crime."

STEELWORKERS FACE DECISION

Boston, May 13 (AP) — The CIO Steelworkers convention was scheduled today to take action on whether to continue the union's stand of refusing to comply with the non-communist pledge in the Taft-Hartley Act.

CIO President Philip Murray turned the matter over the convention after telling the nearly 3,200 delegates that the Taft-Hartley Act is unconstitutional in its requirement of non-communist affidavits by union officers.

The delegates of the CIO's biggest union—928,000 members—voted yesterday to delay backing any presidential candidate, to fight the third party and to join the national CIO in trying to elect at least 100 congressmen they favor.

A delay in endorsing any presidential hopeful until after the Democratic and Republican national conventions was voted because "the time is premature." One committee reported locals have sent in more than 200 resolutions asking "draft Eisenhower."

The delegates, however, voted to back the national CIO Political Action committee and raise nearly a million dollars for the PAC.

Rope making was one of America's earliest industries. A man in Boston produced it commercially as early as 1630.

Philadelphia, July 13 (AP)—Lawrence Barnes, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Barnes of 2010 Riverside drive, New York, died yesterday in Nazareth hospital of injuries received last Friday when he was buried by falling rocks. The boy was playing in an open shed at the Monumental school camp, in nearby Bristol, Pa., where his mother is a nurse, when the rock slide buried him.

DEMOCRATIC DROWNINGS

Tokyo, July 13 (AP)—Democracy, police say, is to blame for increased drownings at Tokyo beaches. Many deaths, police reported today, result because under their new democratic freedom, the swimmers ignore warning signs and police cautions.

Auto Industry Fears Chrysler Strike Will Be Long One; Raising Huge "Kitty"

IDLE WORKERS SET FOR LONG SIEGE ON WAGES

Detroit, May 13 (AP)—An $8,000,000 "kitty" being raised by the CIO United Auto Workers for their Chrysler corporation strikers today gave the auto industry reason to fear a long walkout.

The big corporation's 75,000 production workers who walked off the job yesterday morning to enforce union demands for 17 cents more per hour were set for a long siege on the picket lines.

"The strike of the Chrysler workers is solid," declared Emil Mazey, UAW secretary-treasurer and acting president who is directing the walkout. "They are set for the duration. The Chrysler workers will win."

Some observers estimated the strike might last as long as two months.

Orderly Picket Lines

Orderly picket lines were set up at 12 Chrysler plants in Michigan, two in Indiana and one in California a short time after the strike deadline yesterday morning.

Only the plant at New Castle, Ind., was operating yesterday. Union spokesmen blamed that on delays encountered by UAW delegates in reaching the Indiana city with official strike notice. Norman Matthews, Chrysler director for the union, said the New Castle workers would be out today to make the shutdown complete.

Almost immediately effects of the auto industry's first major strike in two years began to spread. Briggs Manufacturing company, which supplies Chrysler plants, laid off 11,000 workers today and said the rest of its work force of 13,000 would be sent home Monday.

"This probably will be tough," commented one.

Should the walkout stretch into weeks, the UAW should be well set to lend financial assistance to Chrysler employees.

Its executive board yesterday approved plans to assess a million auto workers across the country 50 cents a week in June and $1 weekly in July. That, with $10 to $30 weekly to be contributed from the salaries of paid union employees was expected to boost the union's strike fund to $8,000,000 by August 1.

Strikers stand to lose $800,000 a day in wages as long as the dispute lasts, it has been estimated. Chrysler will be out about 5,000 cars and trucks daily.

Chrysler workers' wages averaged $150 an hour before the strike started. The union originally asked a 30-cent hourly boost, but scaled its demands to 17 cents less than 12 hours before the workers left their jobs.

Pet Goat And Dogs Go Along To School

Reading, Pa., May 13 (AP)—The school Mary used to attend in company with her pet lamb had nothing on the Robeson township school near Reading.

A visitor to the Robeson school is likely to see a goat and three dogs in attendance as well as the usual collection of boys and girls.

The Goat, "Mary Lou," is brought to classes by Leonard Everhart of nearby Birdsboro, Pa., while the three dogs accompany their masters, Claire Bagley, Donald Ludwig, and Lawrence Everhart, Leonard's brother.

"We usually tie Mary Lou to the apple tree," the children's teacher, Mrs. J. William Bagley, said yesterday, "while the boys attend school. During the lunch hour, the animals play with the boys and girls and get all sorts of handouts from their lunch boxes."

"At 3:30," she added, "I don't have to tell any of them that it's time to go home, either."

Castle Is Looted Of $200,000 In Art

Coburg, Germany, May 23 (AP)—Military government officials said Wednesday thieves have robbed historic Coburg castle of art objects which German police valued at $200,000.

The loot included two silver clocks presented to the Duke of Coburg by Queen Victoria of Britain, and three paintings.

Military government officials said the thieves entered the castle—now an art museum—by removing the iron bars from a window. They cut the paintings from their frames. A solid silver ship model, apparently too heavy to abduct, was found lying outside the building.

Coburg castle, which dates back to the 13th century, once was the residence of the Dukes of Saxe-Coburg.

CATERPILLAR STRIKE ENDS

Peoria, Ill., May 13 (AP)—Operations were resumed today at the sprawling Caterpillar Tractor Co. plant here, about seven hours after the CIO United Farm Equipment Workers union called off a 35-day strike.

The union officials ended the strike shortly before last midnight and ordered the picket lines withdrawn immediately. The action was taken after results of yesterday's NLRB election, from which the union was barred, failed to decide a bargaining agent.

Hundreds of workers began arriving for duty at 7 a. m. as 200 policemen patrolled the outer gates of the plant. The officers said the back-to-work movement was quiet and orderly.

The plant which normally employs about 20,000 workers had been idle since the CIO walkout on April 6.

The CIO was barred from yesterday's bargaining agent election by order of the NLRB because its officers had not signed non-Communist affidavits.

The strategy of the striking union in yesterday's election to have employees vote for "no union" rather than three rival groups was unsuccessful. The AFL United Auto Workers received the most votes, 4,707, but failed to get the required majority.

SENATE GROUP SPLIT ON HOW TO BACK EUROPE

By EDWIN B. HAAKINSON
Washington, May 13 (AP)—The Senate foreign relations committee is split over how far this country should go in pledging military backing for non-Communist Europe. That is why the "working paper" resolution Chairman Vandenberg (R-Mich.) has drafted to advise President Truman on possible new moves within the United Nations failed to clear the committee on schedule yesterday.

A senator familiar with the full background gave a reporter the details today on the understanding he would not be named.

Vandenberg's Plan
Vandenberg's resolution (a) stresses the idea of regional defense treaties within the framework of the U.N. charter; (b) calls for this country to take the lead in trying to bring about voluntary discard of the big power veto on most issues short of the use of force; and (c) advises against attempts to revise the U.N. charter itself until all other efforts to strengthen the organization have failed.

Vandenberg has been the Republican leader in all of the major bipartisan moves in international affairs for several years. Most of these have come from the Senate foreign relations committee with unswerving 13 to 0 approval.

In ability to get such backing for the latest move caused yesterday's stalemate, the informant said, adding that unanimity may not be reached.

His story of the background and resulting developments is this:

Several weeks ago top-ranking State Department officials began conferring with Vandenberg on the idea of a resolution aimed at two main goals:

1. To permit the State Department to give some definite answer to

MAINTENANCE FUND SOUGHT FOR AMBULANCE

Emmitsburg's Veterans of Foreign Wars post has set aside the month of June as ambulance month during which donations will be sought, to raise money for maintenance of the ambulance.

Commander Vernon Keilholtz said that containers would be placed in various stores and business establishments during June which will permit those who may wish to make donations to do so.

Keilholtz pointed out that the donations are not being asked toward the cost of the ambulance which was bought by the VFW post and is being paid for by the post. Any sums raised in the June collection will be used entirely to maintain the ambulance service for the community. Expenses for the ambulance include the normal repairs and service needed for an automobile, gasoline and the like. The ambulance sees almost daily use in making trips to and from nearby hospitals it was pointed out.

Busy Memorial Day
Commander Keilholtz also announced plans to close the VFW post home for a few days in the near future while the interior will be decorated and refurbished. New flooring is to be installed and new chrome and leather chairs will be installed among other improvements.

The Vets are scheduled to have a busy Memorial Day, the group will take part in the parade at Gettysburg on the afternoon of May 31 and then will participate in a similar parade at Union Bridge, Md., that evening.

Plans have also been made for the Veterans' post and the Emmitsburg Legion post to cooperate in the sale of buddy poppies during May.

OBSERVERS SAY CLEARS COURT IN ATTACK CASE

Washington, May 13 (AP)—The chance for any real improvement in Russian-American relations appears today to hinge on whether there will be a basic change in Soviet foreign policy.

This is strongly indicated in the statements of top officials here commenting on the disclosure of Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith's two talks with Russian Foreign Minister Molotov, and Molotov's formal reply.

Both President Truman and Secretary of State Marshall have emphasized within the last three days that there is no departure in American policy, which is aimed at preventing further expansion of Russian power.

Marshall Has Hope
But the hope that there may be a change in the Soviet attitude toward the "cold war" and an increased willingness to settle outstanding problems was suggested directly by Marshall at a news conference.

Marshall cited a passage from Molotov's note last Sunday in which he declared that Russia intends to carry out "a peace-loving policy and one of collaboration with regard to the U.S.A."

Molotov said this has always been Russia's policy and it has had the unanimous support of the Soviet people.

Very Important Statement
Marshall told reporters this passage should be interpreted on the basis of the future rather than the past and that in this light it was a very important statement.

The cabinet officer said the people of the world will be watching to see how Molotov's declaration is applied. His own hope, he added, is that it will be reflected in a new spirit of negotiation on the part of

CLEAR COURT IN ATTACK CASE

Carlisle, Pa., May 13 (AP)—Judge W. C. Sheely cleared the courtroom for the reading of a statement attributed to Carl Nolf, 18, on trial Wednesday on a charge of assaulting four-year-old Bonny Lou Schaffer in a parking lot last October 14.

The statement was read in the Cumberland county court by Edgar E. Nowlin, criminal investigator for the First Army, who questioned Nolf. The accused youth, who has pleaded innocent, was in the army at the time of his arrest on charges of criminal assault, assault and battery, aggravated assault and battery and battery with intent to ravish.

Bonny Lou was attacked as she slept in the rear seat of an automobile left in a parking lot near a bowling alley. She had been left there by her grandfather, Master Sgt. John P. Arrich, of Carlisle Barracks, while he bowled.

Admits Hitting Girl
Nowlin said the accused youth's statement said he found the child sleeping in the car. When she awakened, he struck her in the face, Nolf was quoted as saying. Later, the former bowling alley pinboy went to a nearby restaurant, got two sandwiches and went home.

When Sgt. and Mrs. Arrich returned to the automobile at 1 a.m., they found the child severely beaten and assaulted.

Dr. W. Baird Stuart, of Carlisle, testified at the trial yesterday that when he examined Bonny Lou at the Carlisle hospital, he found she had severe bruises of the face, her tongue and knees were cut and she had internal injuries.

Huge ropes 28 inches wide were used by the Persians to move a great army across the Hellespont in 480 B. C. The ropes held together 674 merchant ships over which stretched a plank roadway.

As matters stand today it is by no means clear whether any concrete results will come out of the Smith-Molotov exchange of notes despite the worldwide excitement created by their broadcast from Moscow Monday night.

ORDER POWWOW ON CIVIL RIGHTS SHOWDOWN NOW

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH
Washington, May 13 (AP) — The Senate's southern Democrats ordered a powwow today to decide whether to risk a civil rights showdown now.

Senator Russell (D-Ga.) called a forenoon meeting (exact time uncertain) of the Dixie lawmakers as the Senate cleared the decks for a test vote at 3 p. m. (EST). The vote was scheduled on a motion to return to committee a bill which has raised the civil rights issue ahead of schedule.

The bill seeks congressional approval of an education compact entered into by 15 southern states as the first step toward creating a series of regional universities.

Morse's Strategy
Senator Morse (R-Ore.) has moved to send the measure back to the Judiciary committee for further study. He contends that under the constitution such pacts do not require approval of Congress.

Morse has announced that if his motion is defeated, he will call up an amendment intended to prevent segregation of negroes from white students in the proposed regional schools.

He also has threatened to tack the rest of President Truman's civil rights program to the compact bill. It was that program — calling for anti-lynch, anti-job discrimination and anti-poll tax legislation — which touched off the rebellion of southern Democrats.

They have promised a filibuster whenever any of these measures is brought up.

COMMISSIONER FOR PALESTINE ASKED BY U.S.

By LARRY HAUCK
Lake Success, May 13 (AP) — The United States today asked for appointment of a United Nations high commissioner for Palestine in a last-minute effort to force some U.N. action in the Holy Land crisis.

The surprise move came as the U.N. assembly desperately sought to reach an agreement, however small, before the British give up their mandate rule over Palestine at midnight (5 p. m., Eastern Standard Time) tomorrow.

The new American plan was announced here by a spokesman shortly after President Truman and Secretary of State Marshall conferred in Washington.

Seek Quick Action

The spokesman said it is hoped to push the proposal through a 12-nation assembly group by tonight. The scheme then would have to clear the 58-nation political committee and the full assembly. There are prospects that the assembly or its committees may meet late into the night.

It became apparent yesterday that the U.N. could not reach any agreement on an emergency regime to take over governmental control from the British tomorrow. Efforts then were diverted to less ambitious plans to bring a truce to the Holy Land and mediate Jewish-Arab differences.

Under the American suggestion, the high commissioner would have no governmental authority. He would attempt to mediate, arrange for common services in the Holy Land, provide for protection of the holy places and promote Jewish-

Arab agreement on a future Palestine government.

China, France, the United States, Russia and Britain would appoint the high commissioner, who would report to Secretary-General Trygve Lie and the security council. His salary of approximately $15,000 plus expenses would be paid by the U.N. His term of office would be indefinite.

The American plan also said the U.N. Palestine partition commission should be discharged of its responsibility immediately.

The Jews and Arabs offered no immediate comment on the new scheme. The Jews have said they would accept a mediation plan provided it did not interfere with establishment of a Jewish state May 15. The Arabs oppose anything that might indicate acceptance of partition.

Set New Records In Gasoline Consumption

Harrisburg, May 13 (AP) — More gasoline was used in Pennsylvania last year than ever before and the demand is continuing to rise.

The state Revenue Department reported today 1,799,139,389 gallons of taxable gasoline was sold in the state in 1947, an increase of 8.82 per cent over 1946 and a jump of 6.22 per cent over 1941, the previous peak year.

"The January and February tax returns did not indicate any letup," commented a department spokesman. "It is anybody's guess what the consumption will be this year if the gasoline is available. It depends entirely on the supply."

The Commonwealth collects a four-cent a gallon tax on all gasoline sold except that marketed through federal governmental agencies. One-half cent on the tax is returned to counties for road pur-

HOUSE TO PASS BILL OUTLAWING REDS THIS WEEK

(Editor's note: This is the first of two stories on the anti-Communist bill which comes up soon for a vote in Congress.)

By JAMES MARLOW
Washington, May 13 (AP) — The House, this week or next, expects to pass a bill aimed at crippling, if not destroying, the Communist party here.

The bill has plenty of opponents. For example: Some newspaper editorial writers, the CIO and the civil liberties union. The CIO says:

Labor unions are not mentioned in the bill. But enemies of it say a labor union some time might be pulled into its net because of the bill's wording.

The American civil liberties union calls the bill "obnoxious" and, like the CIO, says it would violate civil rights.

Candidates Split
In spite of the vigorous anti-Communist feeling in this country, there is also plenty of worry about outlawing a political party, even the Communist party. Some of the Republican candidates for president are split on this. Governor Thomas E. Dewey is against outlawing a political party. So is Senator Robert A. Taft. Harold E. Stassen is definitely for outlawing the Communist party.

The House un-American activities committee says the American Communist party:

1. Is part of a world-wide Communist conspiracy and is controlled by the Russian Communist party.

2. Advocates the "overthrow of our government by force and violence."

So far, that's what the committee says. It would have to prove those charges in court if the bill became law. So far the supreme court has not handed down a decision that would support the committee charges.

Difficult Questions
But, for the sake of understanding the problem involved in outlawing the Communist party, suppose this is true:

Suppose the American Communist party, if allowed to enjoy full American civil liberties, tries to come to power and, once there, crushes civil liberties and outlaws all other political parties.

Should such a party be allowed full civil liberties which everyone else is supposed to have in this country; or should it be crushed now to prevent its ever having a chance to set up a dictatorship here?

But if the American government now, for any reason, can deprive any group of Americans of their civil liberties, may the time not come when the same government will deprive all citizens of those liberties?

Recognizing that problem, the committee says:

"We cannot consistently criticize the Communist governments of Europe for suppressing opposition political parties if we resort to the same totalitarian methods here."

But, the committee argues, if the American Communist party cuts its ties with Russia and drops secrecy, there's no reason why it can't have the same liberties as other political parties.

So the restrictions placed on American Communists, under the committee bill, are based on this assumption:

That the American Communist party is part of an international Communist plot to overthrow this government and must be hamstrung although not outlawed.

To Quiz Furloughed Reading Employees

Reading, Pa., May 13 (AP) — All Reading company employees furloughed since 1946 will be questioned in the investigation of a passenger train derailment near Valley Forge, Pa., last Sunday, an interstate Commerce commission official said.

Clyde Waldo, ICC investigator, said yesterday that a check would be made of all Reading workers furloughed in the last two years.

His announcement came after Lewis Henne, of Tamaqua, Pa., conductor on a freight train which was at a nearby water tower at the time of the crash, testified that in his opinion the derailment was the work of "experienced railroad men."

The engineer and fireman on the passenger train were killed and about fifty passengers were shaken up in the crash which railroad officials have said apparently was caused by "deliberate" damage to the track.

Contrary to popular impressions about the industry of ants, a recent study in Panama showed that 40 per cent of the ants did nothing for their community.

EUROPE GIVEN FACTS ABOUT U.S.-RED TALKS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Argument and speculation over the conversation between Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov and American Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith continue to snowball without much indication of where the end may be.

What is said to have started out as an informal and private chat between the two diplomats has both hemispheres by the ears—a development which many observers attribute to smart manipulation by Molotov. It now appears that he acted without consulting Washington in giving to the press a statement which conveyed the idea that the United States had invited Russia to a conference to discuss relations between the two countries—an invitation which the Soviet Union regarded with favor.

Naturally the announcement created a world wide sensation, especially since it placed the United States in the doubtful position of initiating what might be seized on by critics as appeasement. Indeed one Communist newspaper in Germany did declare that this showed America was fed up with the cold-war. Moreover, Britain and France gave indications of being considerably miffed at not having been informed by the United States about this important move.

Prompt Denial
Washington promptly denied that any invitation had been extended, although it reiterated that the door always was open for conversations if Moscow wanted them. Even President Truman took a hand in clarifying the situation, declaring that there had been no change whatever in American policy.

ON BEACH—Ann Elyth of the films swings on beach between swims during vacation at Santa Monica, Calif.

Then yesterday Secretary of State Marshall amplified and emphasized America's position. He stated emphatically that "this government had no intention of entering into bi-lateral negotiations with the Soviet government on matters relating to the interests of other governments he said such discussions "must, as a matter of course, be conducted in the body charged with responsibility for these questions," an obvious reference to the United Nations.

No Change In Status
Gradually these statements seem to have had their effect in getting the facts before a much excited Europe. The idea grows among observers that Mr. Molotov slipped across a very hot one, which might easily have put the United States in the position of appearing as an appeaser, but which has been largely countered by quick action.

One of the most extraordinary aspects of the situation is that British Foreign Secretary Bevin came to the aid of the United States with a red hot speech in Parliament. Bevin reportedly was annoyed at the outset because he hadn't been informed in advance about the Molotov-Smith exchange. However, when he learned the facts he swung into action. Without mincing words he gave Moscow a dressing-down for publicizing the Russian and American statements.

So that seems to leave us about where we were before the Molotov-Smith conversation, except that Russia is assured America is always ready to discuss problems through the proper diplomatic agencies.

NEW RADIO STATION
Washington, May 13 (AP)—A new standard radio station for Allentown, Pa., was authorized yesterday by the Communications commission. The grant went to the Valley Broadcasting corporation to be operated on 790 kilocycles, 5,000 watts daytime, one kilowatt at night.
